

Draft Plan to End Strife by Cutting China Into Five Units

Chinese Members of Peiping Regime Work With Japs
SEE BID TO EUROPE
French Order Suspends Importation of Jap Quota Goods

Hong Kong—(P)—Evacuation of all foreigners from the Chinese port of Swatow appeared likely tonight after a second punishing bombardment by Japanese warplanes concentrating on the city's railway station.

Peiping—(P)—A plan for ending the Chinese-Japanese war by carving China into at least five autonomous units was being drafted today, it was reported, by Chinese members of the Peiping provisional government and their Japanese advisers.

It was admitted the plan had little chance of early acceptance by the Chinese government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, but it was believed to be an indication of the basis on which Japan would be glad to terminate the conflict, now only five days from its first anniversary.

Japanese sources indicated European powers would be offered spheres of influence as a bid for European acceptance of Japan's partial conquest of China, giving the whole scheme a general resemblance to the plans of imperialists of 40 years ago, when the break up of China appeared imminent.

5 Autonomous States envisaged by the draft plans were said to be:

North China—Under the present Peiping provisional government.

Inner Mongolia—Under Teh Wang, Japan's Mongol friend who heads the present Mongolia federation with the capital at Kweihsin, in Suifu province.

East China—Under the Japanese-dominated Nanking "reformed government of China."

Central China—Under the present Chinese government at Hankow.

South China—Under a combination of Kwangtung-Kwangsi provincial leaders.

Authoritative sources said Japan would be willing to recognize Chiang Kai-Shek as head of the Han-Kow regime if he would accept the draft plan was said to provide for the following spheres of influence:

Spheres of Influence
Japan in North China and Inner Mongolia.

Germany in Shantung, where she had an economic foothold before the World war.

Britain in the lower Yangtze valley, including Shanghai.

France in South China.

Tientsin—Under influential British-owned newspaper published in Tientsin, declared in an editorial both Hankow and Tokyo were anxious to conclude peace despite their declarations of determination to fight to the end. It said both sides now were willing to consider peace proposals from the other.

FRENCH ACTION
Paris—(P)—Growing coolness between France and Japan over the war in China has resulted in an abrupt French order suspending importation of Japanese merchandise on the quota list.

The drastic move, coupled with the relative small volume of foreign trade involved, caused observers to link the commercial break with diplomatic incidents growing out of the far eastern conflict.

Foreign traders said France never before had taken so severe a commercial action against any country.

Yet the quotas involved—about one-fourth of Japan's exports to France—make up only half of 1 percent of total Japanese exports, and slightly less than that percentage of French imports. Imports of raw silk were not affected.

France imported 338,300,000 francs of Japanese merchandise of all kinds in 1937 (about $9,134,000 at present rates of exchange).

Japs Break Agreement
One apparent reason for the break was failure of Tokyo to keep an agreement of Feb. 19 to take as much or more French goods in 1938 as in 1936. Because of exchange

Army Troops and Veterans Of All American Wars in Parade for Blue and Gray

Gettysburg, Pa. — (P)— Three thousand regular army troops and hundreds of gaily uniformed legionnaires and drum and bugle corps gathered beneath overcast skies on this historic battlefield today to "strut their stuff" for the wearers of the blue and gray.

Veterans of all the nation's wars and 30 uniformed musical organizations of patriotic groups assembled for a three-mile long procession (at 1:30 p. m., E.S.T.) before the 2,000 aged Civil war veterans and state dignitaries, sitting in canopied stadium stands.

The two-hour military and musical parade and a speaking program tonight were a prelude to the appearance tomorrow of President Roosevelt at this last joint reunion of the blue and gray on the 75th anniversary of the great battle.

Standing on a hill overlooking the rolling battlefield, the president will dedicate the $80,000 "Eternal Light" Peace memorial, erected as an inspiration and "challenge to noble endeavor of a young and hopeful America."

Later, army cavalrymen will ride in review on the ground where

Misconduct Is Charged in Plea

Evans' Lawyer Names Jury Foreman in Motion For New Trial

Waukesha — (P)— The foreman of the jury which convicted Municipal Judge David M. Evans of perjury was charged today with misconduct as the judge's counsel argued a motion for a new trial.

The jury on June 14 convicted Judge Evans of falsely testifying before the grand jury that a slot machine which he owned had never left his possession. The state charged the machine was given to a slot machine operator who placed it in a town of Brookfield tavern.

Walter D. Corizan, Sr., of Milwaukee, counsel for Evans, presented today affidavits in which three members of the jury stated that J. H. Cook of Menomonee Falls, jury foreman, told the other jurors that "he knew of his own personal knowledge that Judge Evans had five or six machines out."

The statement was made, the affidavits declared, shortly after the jury retired to consider Evans' case.

Francis Kuehler, town of Ottawa, Aloysius Shields, town of New Berlin, and William Brimmer, town of Waukesha, were the jurors whose names were on the affidavits.

"There may have been a technical falsity," Corizan argued concerning Evans' testimony, "but there was no wilful nor vicious design or purpose; there was no perjury."

Two Brothers Admit Slaying in New York

New York — (P)— The mysterious four-year-old slaying of William Snyder, a crime that developed into a political issue last fall, appeared today to have been solved by the pleas of guilty of Morris and William "Wolfie" Goldis, brothers.

Morris Goldis, a studious-looking man of 28, was said by the district attorney's office to have admitted before a grand jury last week that he was the "trigger man" in the killing.

Arraigned before Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora yesterday, the Goldis brothers were permitted tentatively to plead guilty to charges of first degree manslaughter.

Asks Removal Of Prosecutor At Florence

Loomis Offers Long Report on Vice Conditions in County

LARGE INCOME CITED

Says District Attorney Couldn't Explain Source of Funds

Madison — (P)— Institution of proceedings to remove District Attorney Allen Wittkopf of Florence county from office, was recommended to Governor LaFollette today by Attorney General O. S. Loomis, whose aids have been investigating alleged vice conditions in the county.

In a lengthy report to the governor, Loomis said his evidence shows that many houses of ill fame and gambling resorts were in operation in Florence county during 1936 and 1937 and that the district attorney had large amounts of income, the source of which he could not explain.

Loomis said Wittkopf had transactions with certain slot machine operators and while the evidence was not sufficient to start prosecution it comes within the purview of the statute providing removal from office.

The state investigation started last February and was followed by the resignation of Sheriff Anthony Grell.

The inquiry then turned to the district attorney, whose income tax reports were audited by the state tax commission.

"The evidence discloses," Loomis said, "that one O'Connor and Witski, residents of Florence county, were the principal owners and operators of slot machines. According to their own admissions these two men owned and operated approximately 50 machines. The district attorney, Allen Wittkopf, had knowledge of the conditions which existed during the years 1935, 1936, and 1937 and admits such knowledge in his statement which is available."

Discussing the audit of the tax commission, Loomis said:

This report indicated that in 1935 the district attorney had a net income of $3,764.57; that he reported his income to the taxing authorities in the sum of $1,509.14, having omitted from his report the sum of $2,255.43. For the year 1936 the report shows that he had a net income of

Hammer Slayer Gets Life Term

Oswald Wolf Is Convicted Of First Degree Murder

Milwaukee — (P)— Oswald Wolf, 59-year-old grocer, was sentenced to a life term in the state prison at Waupun after a municipal court jury late yesterday found him guilty of first degree murder in the slaying of his wife Elsa, 46.

Circuit Judge Robert S. Cowie of LaCrosse pronounced sentence immediately after the jury of 11 men and 1 woman, deliberating more than three hours, returned a verdict.

The celebration started officially at 1:30 this afternoon with the parade which collected near College and Badger avenues, moving east on College avenue and disbanding near the Lawrence college campus.

Troupe to Perform
The celebration will be resumed at 2:15 tomorrow afternoon, with a Manitowoc aerobatic troupe as the opening act at the park. Glenn Frank, national Republican chairman on policy and former University of Wisconsin president, will speak at 3 o'clock. Before his appeared after his conviction, the frail-appearing defendant said: "All I can say is that I'm sorry. I had no intention of doing anything like that. I had no intention of killing my wife because I loved her too much. There's only one thing to look forward to—I will meet her again in death."

Wolf, who bludgeoned his wife to death with a stone-cutter's hammer in their home April 9, had pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. He testified during the trial he "just got mad" and hit his wife after confronting her with a letter from his attorney stating she intended to sue for divorce.

Asked after his conviction if he had any statement to make, the frail-appearing defendant said: "All I can say is that I'm sorry. I had no intention of doing anything like that. I had no intention of killing my wife because I loved her too much. There's only one thing to look forward to—I will meet her again in death."

Plan Simple Funeral For Medill McCormick

Albuquerque, N. M. — (P)— Colonel Robert R. McCormick, Chicago publisher, was to arrive here by plane today to attend funeral services for his nephew, Medill McCormick, youthful student and mountain-climbing enthusiast, who met his death on the jagged face of Sandia peak.

Austere in simplicity, funeral services for the 21-year-old publishing heir were to be held in the reception room of his mother's Los Pablos ranch, shortly after Colonel McCormick's arrival.

Services for young McCormick's climbing companion, Richard Whitmer, who shared the tragic end of their mountain-climbing trip June 22, were pending the arrival of his mother, Mrs. R. E. Whitmer, from England.

WON'T ENTER RACE

Walter J. Kohler, former governor of Wisconsin, declared yesterday in a letter that he "will not accept the nomination for any office." He said that his present responsibilities demand his full time.

Kohler Refuses To be Candidate For Any Office

I Will Not Accept Nomination, Former Governor Declares

Kohler — (P)— Declaring that "I will not accept the nomination for any office," Walter J. Kohler today had set at rest recurring rumors that he would be a candidate for the office of governor of Wisconsin, which he once held.

Kohler yesterday made public a letter he had written to J. E. Thursday of Glidden regarding his candidacy. In it he said:

"I acknowledge your recent letter enclosing petitions signed by local citizens asking me to become a candidate for the office of governor. As I have had no intention of becoming a candidate for any office, there seemed to be no occasion for any announcement by me.

"There have, however, been so many requests and petitions of endorsement coming to me to submit my candidacy this summer that I deem it but fair to these voluntary supporters, and also to those who may desire to become candidates in the open primary, that I make my position clear.

"My present responsibilities demand my full time and attention. Having submitted my candidacy in the past for the governorship and having served in that position, I believe my duties of citizenship in this respect are fulfilled. I am therefore advising you that I will not accept the nomination for any office."

"I am very appreciative of the confidence which you and others throughout the state have shown in me and thank you for your friendly interest."

Jerome Fox to be Keynote Speaker at Party Convention

Fond du Lac — (P)— Jerome Fox, Chilton lawyer, was announced today as the keynote speaker for the Democratic state convention to be held here next Friday and Saturday.

James Corcoran, chairman of the party's state central committee, made the announcement and said Fox also would act as temporary convention chairman.

The temporary secretary and sergeant-at-arms have not been named.

The convention will be held at the armory. The first session will be Friday morning.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, will arrive at the convention hall shortly before noon Friday to address the meeting.

He will then go to Sheboygan to address the Wisconsin Postmaster's state convention the same day.

After Farley's speech, the convention will adjourn until Saturday, when regular business will be transacted and a declaration of principles will be adopted.

Liner Runs Aground With 100 Passengers Aboard

Montreal — (P)— The Cunard White Star liner Acacia with 400 passengers aboard went aground today in the St. Lawrence river near Bix Island, 150 miles northeast of Quebec.

Cunard officials said the passengers all were transferred safely to the Canadian Pacific cargo liner Beaverford. Officials reported the liner had "grounded lightly."

Rescuers Free Nine Men Entombed in Mine

Birmingham, Ala. — (P)— Rescuers today brought out the last of nine men entombed in Praco coal mine by a rock fall but he died as he reached the surface.

Five others died in the cave-in and three were in hospitals with injuries.

J. D. Painter, the last man brought out, had been buried for 18 hours. He talked with rescue crews for hours, begged them to "blast me out." Painter was still alive when pulled out and murmured a few words as he was carried up a passage from the chamber 3,000 feet underground.

Franco Offers Proposal for Neutral Port

Says 'Bona Fide' Shipping Wouldn't be Molested Under Plan

ANSWER IS AWAITED

British Government Deliberates Over Reply to Rebel Chief

London — (P)— Insurgent Generalissimo Franco was said in unofficial quarters today to have replied to Britain's repeated protests at bombing of her ships with a proposal to designate a neutral port in Spain where "bona fide" shipping would not be molested.

The insurgent leader was understood to have put a sting into the tail of his reply by demanding that oil, coal and motor trucks be added to the non-intervention committee's list of contraband goods. Present contraband is limited to actual war material.

Foreign Minister Viscount Halifax and Sir Robert M. Hodgson, Britain's representative in Burgos, insurgent capital, wrestled with the reply which Sir Robert brought to London Thursday.

Their problem was to decide what Britain could do about the devastating aerial raids on the world's biggest merchant fleet—which Prime Minister Chamberlain has consistently refused to protect with the nation's mighty navy.

Would End Bombings
Franco's reply was understood to have stressed his determination to continue bombing "military objectives" and to have denied British ships were singled out for attack.

Viscount Halifax and Sir Robert also discussed Franco's attitude toward the proposed international commission to investigate bombings of civilian populations and their proximity to military objectives.

Some quarters said General Franco had refused to accept the commission, and added it might never be set up.

In a note to the Spanish government Britain declared she was still pressing for formation of a neutral commission to investigate aerial raids in Spain.

The communication replied to a Barcelona note last week which implied a threat to make reprisal attacks on Italy and Germany because of insurgent air raids the Spanish government blamed on foreign aviators aiding Franco.

Hendaye, France—At the Spanish Front—(P)— Fighting in eastern Spain changed today from a general battle to a series of isolated engagements, with insurgent and government forces dividing successes about equally.

In the coastal sector about 35 miles north of Valencia the insurgents finally occupied the village of Bechi, which had been surrounded for two days.

They also reported they had taken Aitosa and Tales, villages just south of Onda and a few miles west of Bechi, representing an advance of a little more than a half mile in three days.

On the western flank of the 50-mile front, government militiamen pushed back insurgent lines south of the Muela de Sanzon range, 20 miles southeast of Teruel.

Pre-Holiday Trade On Share Exchange Sees Prices Mount

New York — (P)— Ignoring vacation lull, buyers swarmed into Wall Street today and bid many stocks up 31 to around 54 to the highest prices of the mid-year bull market.

Despite the temptation to lighten speculative accounts and take-off for seashore and mountain for the long weekend over Fourth of July, trading kept up the last pace of recent sessions.

It was one of the busiest Saturday sessions on the stock exchange in recent years. Big lots of steel, motor oil, copper, aviation and other industrial shares changed hands among the trading posts in the rush of belated buyers to get in on the bull movement.

Reportedly, industry was showing broadening signs of improvement since the market suddenly cast off gloom and inertia two weeks ago seemed to bring in new orders from all parts of the country.

Motor stocks were taken out of the market in sizeable blocks. Chrysler at one time was up more than $4 to around $67, a new 1938 peak. Reports from Detroit said automobile sales, especially high-priced cars, had picked up since the rising stock market began to work like magic in changing sentiment in financial circles.

Crop Damage Because of Rain Set at 2 Million

Milwaukee — (P)— Reports of crop damage in part of southern Wisconsin are being tallied today. Crop damage to corn is estimated at $2,000,000, with vegetable loss at $500,000. Kenosha county's small grain loss was placed at $150,000.

Comparable losses were estimated for Milwaukee, Ozaukee, Racine, Rock and Jefferson counties.

Oats and barley were flattened so that harvesting became next to impossible, the agents said. Hay cut in the fields was regarded as a total loss, with apprehension over fields seeded to hay for next year.

Corn in general did not suffer so heavily.

Move Made to Speed Inquiry On Monopolies

Hague Is Facing Senate Inquiry At Jersey City

Report at Capital States Probe Will be Made Before Next Term

Washington — (P)— The senate subcommittee, informed persons said today, will turn its attention to Mayor Hague and complaints against Jersey City politics before congress meets again.

Chairman L. T. Hitt (P-Wis.) has parried questions about this subject for weeks. He has replied to them by saying the special committee must first wind up its inquiries in the field of labor relations and by mentioning limited funds.

The committee recently received an additional $60,000 from the senate, however, and expects to complete the labor relations inquiry within the month.

Committee investigators said they had a "thick file of requests" for an investigation of the Hague regime in New Jersey.

Among these requests are those from Representatives O'Connell (D-Mont.) and Bernard (F.L.-Alinn.), house members who failed to keep a widely publicized speaking engagement in Jersey City, and Norman Thomas, Socialist leader.

Labor Charges
The senate resolution creating the special committee two years ago directed it "to make an investigation of violations of the rights of free speech and assembly."

Labor leaders have contended that Hague has abrogated rights of free speech and assembly in combating what he termed CIO "reds" and "communists" in Jersey City.

President Roosevelt, in his broadcast address last week, made references to denials of civil liberties which generally were accepted as aimed at Hague, although Mr. Roosevelt called no names.

LaFollette will return to the capital in mid-July to direct public hearings dealing with employers' associations in connection with the steel strike last year in the "Ohio Little Steel area."

Committee investigators said these hearings should be completed in about two weeks.

Work Assigned
Senator King (D-Utah) said, however, that he was assigning "moving commissions" by which committee members might inquire into the activities of any business firm.

Each congressional member of the committee, O'Mahoney said, will be assigned to work with a representative from one of the six executive agencies.

These agencies are the justice, commerce, labor and treasury departments, and the federal trade and securities commissions. Congress voted $500,000 to finance the inquiry by the 12-member group, officially designated as the temporary national economic committee.

Borah told reporters that he would propose that the committee look into alleged price-fixing in the oil industry.

Board Releases Funds To State Departments

Madison — (P)— The state emergency board today released $4,304,500 to state departments to maintain their appropriations at the current level for the first six months of this fiscal year ending Dec. 31, 1938.

The board determined that state agencies will permit the expenditure of this amount which was provided by the emergency "E" budget passed by the 1937 legislature.

At the end of the six months period it will have to re-investigate the financial situation to determine whether appropriations will be continued at the present level for the remainder of the fiscal year or be reduced.

The board said it made the allocation on a six months basis because of uncertain business conditions.

Farmer 'Harvests' Grasshoppers With Home-Made Device

Chippewa Falls — (P)— Grasshoppers held no terror today for Jesse Dressel, town of Anson farmer. Dressel, taking advantage of a Grasshopper's characteristic, merely "harvests" them.

When the hoppers became a serious threat on Dressel's farm a few days ago, he set down and did a little thinking. Then he rigged up a contrivance of galvanized tin, 12 feet long and 4 feet high, and set it on the front bumper of his automobile. An apron reaches down about six inches above the ground.

As the outfit is pushed through the fields, the hoppers obligingly jump and fly into the apron, which delivers them to a bath of old crank case oil, and quickly die.

The machine is a real success, Dressel said. In an hour, he collected six sacks full of insects.

Both Parties Bid For Support of New U. S. Citizens

Young Democrats, Young Republicans Get Greater Voice in Race

Washington — Both major parties will devote much attention this summer to winning the 2,500,000 new voters who have become of age since the 1936 election.

Working largely through Young Republican and Young Democratic clubs, the two national committees are giving youthful party members a greater voice in party affairs and are encouraging widespread organization efforts.

"Frankly, during the last two campaigns we haven't had the support of younger groups that we had hoped for," Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the Republican national committee said today, "but every indication now shows that the trend is definitely back to the Republican party."

Handle Own Financing

Charles H. Shure, executive secretary of the Young Democratic national organization, asserted that 4,000,000 Young Democrats now are enrolled in clubs, and expressed hope the total would be doubled before election day.

Both youth organizations are handling their own financing. Donald Hornback of Cleveland, national president of the Young Republicans, attended a meeting of the Republican executive committee this week—the first representative of the junior group to do so. Shure reported that Young Democrats also were being given a substantial voice in party affairs.

But overtures to new voters have not lessened the efforts of party leaders to swing older citizens to their views.

The Republican command announced that Hamilton would place a speech before the Jefferson at Monticello, Va. This move was quickly interpreted as a follow up on the party chairman's recent visit to Alabama during which he asserted there was "no insurmountable barrier between the real Democrats of the south and the Republican party."

Jefferson, the third president, is regarded as the founder of the Democratic party.

Kettle Moraine Park Area Will Extend Into Outagamie County

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—Progress in the creation of a 33,000 acre new state park project in the big kettle moraine area in eastern Wisconsin, authorized by the 1937 legislature as the first step in a broad state conservation plan, was reported today by the state conservation department.

The kettle moraine area extends from the extreme southeastern tip of Wisconsin north along the shore of Lake Winnebago into Calumet county. The proposed park development will extend slightly farther north, through Winnebago and into Outagamie county, according to the act appropriating funds for the project. By terms of the legislative act, the conservation department will receive $75,000 a year for the acquisition and development of lands in the narrow, 100 mile strip designated as the site for the forest park.

While no land purchases have yet been made, some options in the southern part of the area have been taken, and the department expects to have a land purchase program worked out to present to the legislature next January.

Schedule Black Top Repair Work Tuesday

The work will be supervised by Dana Burgess and Will Peck, engineers of Colprovia Roads, Inc., New York.

Roosevelt Won't Fight Van Nuys In Indiana Race

Milton Says Farley Also to Adopt Hands Off Attitude

Indianapolis — (P) — United States Senator Sherman Milton (D-Ind.), a staunch supporter of the New Deal, said today neither President Roosevelt nor his chief political adviser, Postmaster-General James A. Farley, would attempt to block a rapidly spreading movement among Hoosier Democrats to renominate his senior colleague, Senator Frederick Van Nuys, at their state convention here July 12.

"So far as both President Roosevelt and Jim Farley are concerned," Milton said, "the Indiana Democrats are perfectly capable of making their own selection. They are not taking any interest in the Indiana situation."

Van Nuys, who was rebuked publicly last August by Governor M. Clifford Townsend for his opposition to the president's court reorganization bill, has announced plans to seek reelection as an independent. He denied the Democratic nomination, in the November election. The organization has threatened to defeat him in the convention.

Drive Gains Force

The drive to secure the nomination for Van Nuys appeared to be gaining momentum as the result of a conference between Governor Townsend and his lieutenants late yesterday. The governor said he would give an opportunity to renominate Van Nuys if they desired. Milton, who attended the conference, said the Van Nuys situation was "far from being settled." Authoritative sources disclosed he suggested that Philipine High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt be chosen to oppose Raymond E. Willis, Angulo publisher and Republican nominee, in the November election.

Frank McHale, Indiana's Democratic national committeeman, said "nothing further was done" at the unity conference, but he predicted the Townsend-Van Nuys breach would be closed "some time shortly after July 4."

Governor Murphy Would Slash Pay Of State Workers

Sees $10,000,000 Saving In New Michigan Economy Program

Detroit — (P) — Governor Frank Murphy announced today an economy program here today, aimed at cutting $10,000,000 from state expenses during the current fiscal year and providing for salary cuts for approximately 16,000 state employees ranging from 6 to 15 per cent.

The governor explained his move was necessary to "keep the state solvent and the government stable." The salary cuts would be effective as of July 1, Murphy said.

In addition, the governor said, expenses would be curtailed by not filling the positions of employees who fail to pass civil service examinations, and by eliminating unnecessary state services.

Referring to earlier reports that approximately 3,000 state employees would be dismissed, the governor said "no one will be fired. We will simply abide by the civil service law in letting out those employees who do not pass their examinations. But we will not fill the vacancies created by examination failures at the present time."

$2,000,000 Saving

Murphy estimated the salary cuts would save the state approximately $2,000,000, and that unfilled vacancies resulting from examination failures and the elimination of "unnecessary services" would result in a saving of 15 per cent of the state's current budget.

The pay cuts, Murphy said, would be on the following schedule: Salaries of $1,000 a year, 6 per cent; $1,000 to $2,000 a year, 8 per cent; $2,000 to $3,000 a year, 10 per cent; $3,000 to $4,000 a year, 11 per cent; $4,000 to $5,000 a year, 12 per cent; $5,000 to $6,000 a year, 13 per cent; $6,000 to $7,000 a year, 14 per cent; over $7,000, 15 per cent.

The governor said the only exemption would be for employees paid at an hourly rate.

At Lansing an authoritative source said Governor Murphy has instructed the budget department to impose a 13 per cent reduction in his own salary, and that other state officials whose salaries are fixed by statute would be invited to take voluntary cuts.

The governor receives $10,000 a year, $5,000 as salary and $5,000 for expenses. The other statutory salaries range upward from $8,000.

Hoan Refuses to Become Candidate For Senate Seat

Decides to Retain Present Office as Mayor of Milwaukee

Milwaukee — (P) — Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee declined today the nomination for the United States senate given him by the Farmer-Labor Progressive Federation's recent state convention.

Henry Rutz, state executive secretary of the federation, made the announcement. He said that in a letter to him, Mayor Hoan pointed out that he had refused the nomination at the convention and later reconsidered only upon the insistence of many friends among workers and farmers.

Now, however, said a statement issued by Rutz, the mayor has decided not to accept the nomination because of personal reasons and because of a feeling of loyalty to the citizens of Milwaukee, who "have repeatedly reelected him to the leading office of Milwaukee."

"I cannot subscribe to the theory that my nomination is a necessity," Hoan wrote. "The federation has already won a prominent

Roosevelt's Trip West Growing Into Extensive Pre-Election Campaign

Hyde Park, N. Y. — (P) — President Roosevelt's trip to the Pacific developed today into a man-sized campaign and sightseeing tour.

Starting from Washington July 7, the president will speak from platforms, converse with people and look over the country all the way to San Diego.

At that California port, he will leave behind the activity of this year's congressional campaigns on the Pacific and a trip through the Panama canal to a southeastern harbor.

The transcontinental journey of politics and pleasure will take him into many states where his administration is an issue in primaries and general elections.

And lesting place in Wisconsin's affairs. With the fine slate of candidates you have, victory can, and probably will, be achieved. Personally I promise even greater effort than in the past not only to build but to convince the common folks of our state that their best interests lie in giving full support and electing the entire slate of federal endorsed candidates."

Rutz announced the federation's state executive board would meet in Madison July 10 to fill the vacancy caused by Hoan's declination.

77 Boys Pass Swim Tests In Post-Crescent School

The Appleton Post-Crescent swimming classes are over and last night 77 boys passed their 60-foot tests and received junior beginners' swimming certificates at the Y. M. C. A. pool. An additional 22 boys swam 20 feet, the width of the tank.

This year's school was the largest and most successful ever conducted at the Y. M. C. A. for a total of 183 boys and girls received certificates compared to 119 last year. Registration also was larger with 978 youngsters from all over the Post-Crescent circulation area enrolled.

Ray Risch, physical director, said today that about 40 additional youngsters will pass the final test today. Many of them were nervous and could not swim before the large crowd gathered to see the finals. Those who do not pass today will be given a chance next week, he said.

Boys and girls who have not received their certificates may call for them at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday, Risch said.

Tests last night were conducted by W. C. Pickett and James Bailey, boys' instructors. Following are the names of boys who passed their final tests last night:

Campaign Warning Not Idle Threat, Lawrence States

Congress Can Punish Wrong-Doers by Refusing to Seat Them

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington — Those persons in the political world who may be taking lightly the warnings issued by the senate committee on campaign expenditures, and particularly the sharp statement by Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts, will be inclined to grow more serious when they realize what may happen in the next session of congress when members of the senate and house present their credentials for seats.

While congress did not enact a law prohibiting federal employees from using governmental funds and machinery for election purposes, the senate and house are still, under the constitution, the final judges of the qualifications of their respective members.

Money spent improperly to influence a state legislature or to influence an election has been the basis time and again of charges relating to the right of an elected candidate to hold the seat he has won. The votes of individual members on the moral issues involved in these elections have risen to plague them in their own subsequent election contests.

Punished at Polls

Some of the senators who voted to seat the late Senator Lorimer, of Illinois, after disclosures were made of the improper use of money in obtaining his election, found punishment awaiting them at the polls. Members of congress are peculiarly sensitive to how they themselves voted when an issue of honesty or dishonesty in an election is presented.

If the senate campaign expenditures committee should now lay down rules as to what constitutes proper and improper influence in elections, the various candidates for the senate will find themselves confronted by a challenge as to their eligibility if they should in any way allow their election campaigns to become interwoven with WPA activity or electioneering by federal officials and employees.

Fundamentally, there is little difference between the use of federal money and private money to influence congressional elections. The fact that officials of an administration realize that prosecutions can come only from members of their own political group, it would seem, might cause them to lean over backwards in observing the proprieties.

Don't Hesitate

Fortunately, there are independent Democrats in the senate who will not hesitate a moment to investigate charges of improper use of federal money among their fellow-democrats. Mr. Walsh of Massachusetts was quite tactful in assuming that any use of federal machinery would be "traitorous."

President Roosevelt and the Democratic party. This, at least, is the formal and official position taken by the administration. From now on, it will be a question of whether these are regarded as mere words or whether they convey a real warning.

Said Senator Walsh: "Any agency or officer of the present administration who now or in the coming campaign will use federal funds to influence votes is not only acting in an unchristian and un-American manner, but, in my opinion, is a traitor to President Roosevelt and the Democratic party."

"If any there be who suppose that the public conscience is temporarily stunted by the worry, distress and anxiety that present economic conditions have caused, let them not be unmindful of the wrath that an aroused public conscience can exercise when relief of human misery is degraded to gutter politics."

Applies to Candidate

Senator Walsh has aimed his warning at federal employees, but it applies equally to the beneficiaries of such action as federal agencies may take, namely the candidates themselves. It is here, particularly, that the congress itself takes jurisdiction. For, in the case of private funds, there have been in the past many incidents in which contributors were not punished, but the recipients of the campaign benefits were refused seats.

Whether the money be private, contributions or public funds, the principle of unimpaired and dishonesty is just the same. The senate campaign expenditures committee has done a constructive public service in calling the attention of the American people to the importance of honest elections this autumn. This means that every citizen can be on his guard and obtain testimony as to the improper use of public funds and present it any time from now till next January to the senate committee on campaign expenditures. For, if there have been scandals and if improper influence has been used by anyone to win a primary contest or an election, the congress can refuse to permit an elected candidate to take his seat when it becomes convinced improper influence has been used upon the electorate.

European Nations to Do Serious 'Horsetrading' to Isolate Spanish Fireworks

BY MORGAN M. BEATTY

Washington — (P) — The simple truth about the Spanish war at this stage of the game can be covered in two sentences:

1. Franco's drive to end the war has bogged down, so that he will require at least another year if he keeps on going at his present pace to clean up both Valencia and Barcelona.

2. Most of the other nations in Europe, whatever their sympathies in Spain, have therefore decided to do some serious horsetrading to isolate the Spanish fireworks and remove them from the other powder-kegs on the Continent.

The business of horsetrading among governments is naturally a complicated one and requires a lot of high-sounding terms, such as non-intervention, belligerent rights, etc.

But from the viewpoint of American experts it's beginning to look as if Great Britain and France are quite willing to see the Franco-Mussolini-Hitler combination win out in Spain, if in return, Mussolini and Hitler get out of the Spanish theater of action.

Sizing It Up

Here's how they figure that out: Every time you get down to cases, the meddling of outside nations in Spain has nothing at all to do with principles, but rather with the peculiar geography of the Mediterranean ocean and the Spanish peninsula.

The special points of interest in the Mediterranean are the Balearic islands and Gibraltar. The islands are the property of Spain and lie just off the east coast of that country. Probably a major reason why Mussolini supported Franco was the opportunity the alliance offered to base his submarines and airplanes in the Balearics.

For the Balearics are the military keys to the African colonies of France—colonies that would pour men and supplies across the Mediterranean to France if she were engaged in a bitter-end war. With the Balearics in Mussolini's hands, and filled with Italian submarine and airplane bases, France's line of supply from Africa would be menaced.

Guns Toward Gibraltar

Then there's Gibraltar, now in British hands, which gives Britain control of both ends of the Mediterranean. If Germany could erect big gun emplacements on other war machinery in Spain just across from Gibraltar, and rumor says she has already done this, British control of the ocean would be menaced beyond comfort.

Therefore, it's quite natural for the British and French to offer any proposition, even if it means a Franco victory, if only Germany and Italy would take their volunteers—so-called—out of Spain and the Balearics. It's quite natural for these two powerful nations to allow Franco to bomb vessels carrying their flags, and otherwise offer them insult, so long as they figure they can eventually lure Mussolini and Hitler away, without risking a war.

That explains why Franco's

ate campaign expenditures committee has done a constructive public service in calling the attention of the American people to the importance of honest elections this autumn. This means that every citizen can be on his guard and obtain testimony as to the improper use of public funds and present it any time from now till next January to the senate committee on campaign expenditures. For, if there have been scandals and if improper influence has been used by anyone to win a primary contest or an election, the congress can refuse to permit an elected candidate to take his seat when it becomes convinced improper influence has been used upon the electorate.

Twin Cities With Appleton in New Milk Price Order

Dealers Get Copies of Regulations Governing Prices Until Nov. 1

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—Dealers in the Appleton and Neenah-Menasha regulated milk markets today received copies of new orders covering their areas which became effective July 1. The order was announced at the office of the department of agriculture and markets Friday afternoon.

Because the department at recent hearings in Appleton found that the Appleton and Neenah-Menasha markets are substantially the same, the orders for the new milk market areas are almost identical. Only major difference is a provision for a 14 cent reduction from the regular retail price for quarts of milk sold at milk stands maintained by dealers in the Neenah-Menasha market, a provision not written into the Appleton order.

Change in Price

Major changes in the orders for both markets include a reduction from 58 cents to 55 cents in the price paid to producers per pound of butterfat for all milk sold or delivered by the dealer as fluid milk, including relief milk and that used in flavored milk and drinks, and fluid cream. The reduction will be effective until October 31 of this year. Beginning November 1 the former price schedule of 58 cents per pound of butterfat will be resumed.

Second major change, effective in both orders, provides that for all other milk purchased the producer will be paid a price per pound of butterfat equal to the monthly average of 12 times the average Chicago 92 score butter per pound quotations, as reported by the federal department of agriculture, and 24 times the average Plymouth Call Board longhorn cheese per pound quotations.

Under the old order the price of surplus milk was based on the average price of Plymouth cheese only.

No Major Changes

With the exception of minor changes in the Neenah-Menasha buttermilk price, the price schedules in the new orders are the same as under the old regulations. For the staples they include wholesale and retail: milk, quart, nine and ten cents for 3.8 and 3.9 buttermilk, ten and 11 cents for 3.8 to 4.4 butterfat content; and 11 and 12 cents for over 4.4 per cent butterfat; Vitamin D milk, one cent a quart, one half cent per pint, and one fourth cent per half pint above the regular prices; coffee cream, 18 to 22 cents per quart, 24 to 26 cents per pint; medium cream, 24 to 28 cents per quart, 28 to 30 cents a quart, 28 and 30 cents a pint; whipping cream, 32 to 36 cents per quart, 36 and 38 cents a quart, 34 and 36 cents a pint; flavored milk, 11 and 15 cents a quart, six and eight cents a pint; flavored drink, ten and twelve cents a quart, six and seven cents a pint; cottage cheese, 12 ounce package, eight and ten cents; skim milk, fifteen and fifteen cents a gallon, five and five cents a quart.

The Appleton market, the order says, includes the cities of Appleton and Kaukauna, the villages of Kimbely, Little Chute, and Combined Locks, parts of the towns of Vandenberg, Grand Chute, Buchanan and Kaukauna in Outagamie county, part of the town of Harrison in Calumet county, and one section of the town of Menasha in Winnebago county.

The Neenah-Menasha areas is defined as the cities of Neenah and Menasha, that part of Winnebago county east of highway 125 and north of the Fox River and Lake Winnebago, all except section one of the town of Menasha, a strip one quarter of a mile wide along the shore of Lake Winnebago to High Cliff, the area between county highway A and Lake Winnebago in the town of Neenah, and the area east of a line one quarter of a mile west of the city of Neenah, from highway 150 to the south line of section 32, and east to County highway A.

In Same Area

In a preface explaining the new orders the department of markets observed that "the southern part of the Appleton regulated market area is very close to the northern part of the Neenah-Menasha regulated market area. Many producers deliver milk to dealers who distribute in both these areas. Conditions are similar in the two areas, and no reason appears why prices charged by dealers should not be the same in both for the same items. Heretofore, however, there have been price differences on certain items of regulated milk for which the same prices were prescribed has been allowed to have a maximum butterfat content of 3.8 per cent in the Appleton market and 3.9 per cent in the Neenah-Menasha market, and have been scheduled in the Appleton order for certain dairy products for which none were scheduled in the Neenah-Menasha order, although the same products were and are distributed in both.

"For a number of months consumers have purchased less regulated milk than before in these markets, thus reducing income of dealers without a corresponding decrease in expense of their business. Labor cost of dealers has actually increased, and there is no indication that it will soon be lowered.

"At the same time, market prices of milk and other dairy products elsewhere than in the regulated milk market of Wisconsin have declined, and are considerably lower than they were at the time the present price schedules in these two orders were promulgated, so that there is now a greater price advantage to producers for these regulated markets over other milk producers.

"The price for surplus or manufactured milk in these two orders has heretofore been based entirely on market prices of cheese, while some of the dairies involved find it impossible to dispose of their surplus except by manufacture into butter."

COMPANY D LEAVES FOR 15 DAYS OF SOLDIERING

The above picture was taken this morning as Company D entrained for Camp Williams, Camp Douglas, Wis., and 15 days of training. The boys were happy about the whole thing, because although there's plenty of hard work ahead, there's also a lot of fun in sight during the annual period of drills and maneuvers. The Appleton unit will appear in the mass review on July 4 at Camp Williams which will be known as Governor's Day.

Unsettled Weather and Showers May Dampen Plans of Celebrants During Double Holiday Weekend

Overcast skies plus predictions of unsettled weather plus little change in temperature adds up to a gloomy outlook for the double holiday weekend and may subtract from the golfing, fishing, swimming and picnic plans of Fourth of July celebrants in Appleton and vicinity.

Intermittent showers, atmosphere laden with moisture and cool temperatures have made things none too comfortable the last few days and the weather man gives little solace to families intending to engage in out-of-door activities today, Sunday and Monday. Civic celebrations will be staged, however, rain or shine and there's many an optimistic remark that "maybe the weatherman might be wrong."

This week's rain has delayed peacocking operations in the county, canners reported today, but the situation will clear up if the weather does. An official of the Fuhrmann Canning company said the firm has lost two days this week because of the rain which soaked pea vines. A Hortonsville cannery reported that its operations were curtailed but there was no serious interference.

May Decrease Yield

Extensive damage to crops and impairment of rail and road traffic has been reported in various sections of the state but the only pessimistic comment in this area intimates the conditions may decrease the expected yield. One Royalton farmer asserted the "crop prospect is good. The stand of grain is exceptional. It is several years since we have had even half a grain crop."

The farmer went on to say "The corn in many fields is now knee high, alfalfa is nearly ready for a second cutting. No, indeed, haven't had a crop too much of rainfall as yet. On Fourth of July two years ago many of the pastures were bare and brown."

About 39 of an inch of rain fell during the 24 hours preceding 9 o'clock this morning in the vicinity of Appleton, making a total precipitation of 2.77 inches the last three days.

Temperatures continued to move in a narrow range with a point of 68 degrees at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and a low mark of 61 degrees at 3 o'clock this morning, according to records at the power plant of the Wisconsin Michigan Power company. The thermometer on the roof of the Post-Crescent building stood at 66 degrees at noon today.

MOTORISTS WARNED

Madison —(P)—The state highway commission warned holiday motorists today to drive with extreme care over southern Wisconsin highways which were damaged by heavy rains of the last few days.

Portions of U. S. 12 and State Trunk 36 in Walworth county and State Trunk 50 in Kenosha county were under water but the department said the water has receded, that repair work is under way and that the roads, with a few exceptions are open.

U. S. 12 traffic between Lake Geneva and Elkhorn was being detoured over State Trunk 50 from Lake Geneva to Williams Bay and County Trunk H to Elkhorn.

Span Washed Out

Washed out a 30-foot span on State Trunk 36 between Springfield and Burlington caused a detour of traffic from Springfield to Springfield over County Trunk G and then over State Trunk 11 to Burlington.

A bridge was washed out on U. S. 14 and 61 west of Coon Valley. Traffic was being detoured from Westby to Cashon over State Trunk 27 and from Cashon to La Crosse over State Trunk 33.

The highway department said the detours are in good shape and that repair crews hoped to have the regular highways open today.

TREMENDOUS LOSSES

Madison —(P)—The state department of agriculture and markets had unofficial reports of tremendous

ous losses to Wisconsin's oat and barley crops by heavy rains.

Ralph Ammon, acting director of the department, said estimates of the total loss will not be available for more than a week but advance reports indicate destructive effect upon the crops, especially barley.

Barley, of which Wisconsin is the largest producing state in the nation, had grown rapidly and the excessive moisture has flattened it out so that much of the crop will not recover and cannot be harvested, Ammon said.

MORE RAIN FORECAST

Chicago—(P)—More rain was forecast for today in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin where farmers survey crops soaked from yesterday's downpour and estimated losses running into millions of dollars.

The damage in Cook county alone was estimated at $1,000,000 by C. A. Hughes, county farm adviser.

Yesterday's showers, heaviest during the early morning hours, left grain fields beaten down, roads inundated and numerous creeks and small rivers overflowing their banks.

Railroads suffered more heavily in the Chicago area for many years. Service in branches of the Soo line, the Chicago and North Western and the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroads was interrupted for a time by washouts.

EXPERIENCE FLOODS

Kenosha—(P)—Less than half an inch of rain today aggravated flood conditions in southeastern Wisconsin, caused by excessive rainfall of the past few days.

Water ran five feet over the Fox river dam at Wilmet today, flooding an area half a mile to the east for three miles. Most of the submerged land was in farm crops.

Traffic was going over the main east-west Highway 50, with water seven to eight inches deep on the concrete span over the Fox river. Motorists were receiving driving instructions from road crews.

Numerous secondary highways in Kenosha county still were closed to traffic today.

No trains were running between Chicago and Lake Geneva on the North Western railway today, due to a washout of a bridge one mile west of Genoa City. Many high-

Superintendent of Mails Finishes 25 Years of Service

When a Post-Crescent reporter yesterday asked the switchboard girl at the newspaper building to call John B. Letter at the Appleton post office, she said, "You can't find me."

The reporter wasn't kidding, although the switchboard girl was certain he was, for John B. Letter is superintendent of mails at the Appleton post office and yesterday he celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary in that position.

When Mr. Letter, who is 65 years old, arrived at work yesterday, he found a bouquet of flowers on his desk. An attached note from Postmaster Stephen Ballet and other members of the force read: "John, congratulations on your quarter of a century anniversary as our head of the mailing division."

Mr. Letter went to work in the post office 40 years ago—a young man of 25 years—as a dispatcher in the mailing division. He started April 26, 1898, and on July 1, 1913 was named superintendent of mails.

When he joined the mailing division in 1898, the post office building was located on the site now occupied by the Montgomery Ward and Company store. There was no rural free delivery in those days.

When Mr. Letter first entered the service, the postmaster was Captain J. M. Baer and when he became superintendent of mails in 1913, his superior was Postmaster Morris F. Bartlett.

Mr. Letter was born in Elk Point, S. D. June 21, 1873, and came to Appleton Jan. 1, 1898.

For the year 1937 the report indicates that he had a net income of $9,653.61. We waited until March 15 for him to file his 1937 return. When this date arrived, he asked for and obtained from the commission an extension of thirty days in which to file his return. The district attorney informed us, however, that prior to March 15 he had filed his federal return, which showed a net income of approximately $6,000.00.

Since that time the district attorney has filed an amended return for the years 1935 and 1936 with the tax commission and has filed an amended return with the federal government, indicating a net income approximating the amounts

The porch will be of frame materials, will be 16 feet long and 7 feet wide. Cost of the improvement is estimated at $100.

PWA Office Will Send Man to Check $543,000 Project

Council Delays Final Action on Paving Program Until Wednesday

A representative of the regional PWA office at Chicago will be in Appleton Tuesday to check the $543,000 city-wide street paving program before the final application is filed in PWA. Mayor Goodland announced at a special meeting of the common council Friday afternoon.

Final action on the project was delayed until next Wednesday to give the city engineers and other officials a chance to study the final draft after the PWA check.

However, aldermen informally voted to include three additional streets in the program. Third street from State street to Story street, Bouten street from Verbrick street to Seymour street, and Clark street from Commercial street to Parkway boulevard.

Include Sewers, Mans

The council also will attempt to secure 45 per cent of the cost of installation of sewer laterals and water mains, work that is necessary before pavements can be laid on the various streets included in the program.

Mayor Goodland explained that if the preliminary work can be included in the project, the city not only will get the benefits of additional PWA money but will be able to start work on the program as soon as the application is approved by the federal government. He said many men could be employed on installation of water mains and sewers the rest of the summer and throughout the winter months.

Inclusion of Third street in the program will give the city a chance to start actual paving "work" this year if the project goes through on time, he said.

Gravel-Crushing Is Resumed in Township

Forest Junction — Resumption of gravel-crushing in the town of Brillion crushing the northern end of the road was scheduled for the end of this week to supply a quantity of surfacing material to be used in connection with the application of road oil on village streets in Forest Junction. The road oil is to be applied by Calumet county equipment next week. Asks Residents Not to Throw Refuse in Gutters

Alfred Wickesberg, city engineer, today requested residents of Appleton to refrain from throwing leaves and grass or other refuse into the gutters in front of their homes. DIARY OF A REPORTER: Saturday: To lunch with Geoffrey Parsons and Fred Wilman in the handsome pine-paneled dining room downstairs at Bellows & Co. Mr. Wildman announced that the meal would be practically nothing, just a simple entree or so run in from Pierre's restaurant, the kitchen of which is just across the back garden. It included a side of fine Italian ham, Kennebec salmon steak meuniere, broiled chicken, browned to a crisp in flaming Armagnac at the table and served by Lafitte, Bellows' aged and knowing steward; a bale of fresh asparagus and a wonderful Pont l'Evêque cheese. The wines were less ingenious: two Chablis, whose titles escape; four claret, an Haut Brion '74, a Gruaud Larose '65, La Tour Blanche '65 and a Palmer Margaux '64, the last of which was just about the most brilliant Bordeaux this department had ever, as the French have it, decanted. Afterward, there was a little sniffing of assorted Armagnacs and a private stock virgin Cognac of 1906. A simple lunch and back to the salt mines by 5:30.

Sunday: Lunch in the back room of the Plaza with Roger Stearns; cocktails with Mrs. Aileen Winslow at the Lombardy, where a monster but frivolous backgammon game was in progress, and to dinner at the Stork with Sherman Billingsley and Chick Farmer, while an assortment of celebrities, including Mr. Winchell and Bobby La Branch, loitered at us from the bar. Mr. Billingsley, bored with being the town's most successful whoopee merchant, wonders if he could make a living doing something else. Everybody hastens to warn him against trying. The Stork is too much of a without-which-nothing to the Manhattan scene.

This is supposed to make coffee better.

Monday: Lunching at 21; Schuyler Cudner tells me about a new "Coffee Soother" he has invented. One jigger of hot, black coffee, one jigger of applejack, half a jigger of cream de coffee, shake with ice and strain into a parfait glass. Mighty fine, says Schuyler, might fine! Later to Gloria Bengtson's wedding with Margaret and Brock Pemberton, at the Little Church Around the Corner, with a monster reception at the St. Regis. Every one you ever heard of was there, and approximately a thousand fashion reporters, taking notes on what every one had on. When one pauses to recall that hoisting champagne highbals at one table alone were Katherine Vincent, Lady Suzanne Wilkins, Mimi Durant, Daphne Bull, Tokio Payne, Peggy Williams, Alice-Leone Moats and Myra Kingsley, one can imagine that it was a sartorially splendid congress of folk. Happy equals were evoked when the most Mrs. Emile Etting and the rest of the party were cranked by the photographers for a group picture of the bridal party. Somebody, Gloria felt, was missing. Who could it be? Count noses! Yes, somebody definitely wasn't there that should be. Oops, screamed the bride, it's my husband! Will somebody find Mr. Etting? Still later to N. B. C. to broadcast, with Arthur Menken, the ace war photographer, on the Vialis hour. Still later back to Jack and Charlie's in Morocco, to the Stork, which seemed largely populated by Herbert Bayard Swone Jr. and to bed.

Tuesday: For the second time to see "The Two Bouquets," the most fetching of Gilbert-and-Sullivanish Victorian valentines and just about the nicest hot-evening entertainment in town. The handsome Macklin Marrow was conducting and La Hitt's Tavern bar, across the way, was densely populated at the intermission by Jack Whitney and Louise Macy, Myron McCormick, Jed Harris, Bugs Meredith and other thirsty playgoers. And to Billy Rose's Casa Manana, jammed to the one spot, the supper show and the one spot on Broadway showing no slightest sign of hard times. A beautifully managed cabaret, with the slickest service and most opulent floor show imaginable.

Wednesday: Lunch with Joseph Bryan 3d and Howard Barnes at Bleek's. Bryan, who is doing a profile of Bob Benchley for "The Saturday Evening Post," is probably the greatest connoisseur of eccentrics of the generation. He told of the eminent Charleston gaffer who was accustomed to carry a live game cock in his trousers pocket, and if offended by any one would swing the bird by the neck so that its spurs would rake the offender's face; also, of the member of a celebrated Philadelphia family who mowed for three days like a cat and then took a shot at himself as a common nuisance. Later to the Louis-Schmelling box-fight with Evelyn McLean, who insisted that, since she had worn it through Soviet Russia, she could wear the Hope diamond in Harlem—and did. Later, to Morocco, and hoisted a few tall ones with Cissie Patterson and her party and the place packed with folk like Bir Hubert and Suzanne Wilkins, Bill Howard and other refugees from the fight. A hot night on the town, and probably the last one of the spring season.

One of the brave sights of the town these summer mornings is the excursion steamboats, awash with hunting and trailing streamers of coal smoke, as they head up the Hudson to Bear Mountain and the other hot-dog paradises of the people. Most venerable of all the lines is the Hudson River Day Line, which has been running packets hereabouts for 112 years.

In an age of chromium offices and streamlined desks the general offices of the Hudson River Day Line offer a refuge for those afflicted with yearnings for roll-top desks, elderly clerks and a leisurely office routine.

Although the steamboats are modern enough and boast such newfangled doodads as loudspeakers, sport decks and cafeterias, the offices, out on the end of the West Forty-second Street pier, maintain the calm and pleasant mustiness of the '30s. It has been strictly a family affair since 1826, when it was founded by Abram Van Santvoord, whose great-grandson, Alfred Van Santvoord Olcott, now carries on as president. "A. V." as he is known to the line's employees—a lot of whom have been with the line almost as long as he has—sits in an office just about big enough for a desk and three chairs and runs the line—sits there, that is, when he isn't dashing up and down the river like crazy on his boat, to see that everything is running smoothly.

In the early days of Day Line transportation between New York and Albany, the really smart passengers traveled (at double fare) in the elegant "safety barge" towed behind the steamboat—there was less vibration and probably less concussion, too, if the boiler blew up. About the middle of the last century the pride of the river was the line's Mary Powell, a floating

Former G-Man Has 'No Recollection' Of Secrecy Pledge

New York (AP)—Leon G. Turrou, former G-man, said Friday he had "no recollection" of having signed a statement in 1935 in which he promised to "write nothing or give out no information about the F. B. I."

"I am certain the statement was signed at the same time that a number of other papers were presented to me for my signature," Turrou said in a statement. "Believing it to be one of several official documents requiring my signature I signed it."

"I have read scores of articles . . . written by Mr. Hoover (J. Edgar Hoover, head of the F. B. I.) while he was directing the F. B. I.—articles advertised as being taken from the secret files of the F. B. I. articles, which, I believe, were valuable to the nation at large in exposing bad criminal conditions and which brought about better public cooperation."

"However, if Mr. Hoover now proposes to hold me firmly to a statement signed casually, while he continues to secure a huge income from his own writings in addition to his salary from the government, I shall take steps at once to see that these rules about writing are applied equally to all members of the F. B. I. from the lowliest agent to the director himself."

retwork palace that could pick up her skirts and do twenty-five knots when goaded, and she frequently was, as the river skippers of those days went in for racing in a big way. Even the handsome man in the woodwork wasn't too good to be hacked down for fuel when a little more steam was needed. The Mary Powell is still spoken of with reverence at the Day Line, and her great bell is still in service, ringing the modern Day Liners in and out of the pier at Indian Point. Young Alexander Olcott, fresh out of Princeton and latest of the Van Santvoord line to enter the service, wears a white shirt and tie, and from the Mary Powell as a watch fob. The Day Line is like that.

Around the town most of the taxi drivers on the cab rank outside the Plaza Hotel used to be horseback jehus on the same stand. In the same tradition an Hymn, carriage starter, the Hymn, inous Door, used to be a cab driver on the same beat. . . . Uncommon Birds Found Near Girl Scouts Camp

By CLARA HUSSONG

Ever since I've been interested in birds and their music I've been dreaming of living, for time at least, in a spot where upon awakening in the morning I would hear the song of at least one of our resident thrushes, the wood, hermit or Wilson's thrush. Not until the last few weeks which I spent at Geokenlaw, the Green Bay area, near Wabeno, has this dream been fulfilled.

The tent which was my home during the time I remained there was pitched on a hill about a fourth of a mile from the main lodge. Three cabins occupied by Girl Scouts stood near the tent but the land to the left of the cabins and behind us was a wilderness of heavily wooded hills and valleys.

Heard Wood Thrush

The realization of my dream came the very first morning in camp. Our tent faced the east and my tent-mate and I were awakened at sunrise by light streaming in through the mosquito netting of the doorway. Wrens, robins, rose-breasted grosbeaks and red-eyed vireos sang in the trees and shrubs surrounding us. As I sat up to listen I was overjoyed to hear the bell-like tones of the wood thrush added to the early morning chorus.

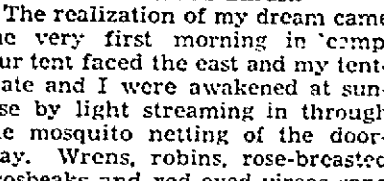

"Come to me, come to me," are the words generally adapted to the song of this thrush and I lost no time in accepting the invitation. The sound came from a wooded slope near the shop, a building used jointly by the handicraft and nature students. I hurried to the place to make sure that my ears weren't deceiving me.

I found half a dozen wood thrushes singing there. In the days that followed I discovered that this spot was a favorite for the birds during the early morning hours. Later in the day they sought the seclusion of the deeper woods in the hills beyond the shop. Several trails led through the hills and whenever I took any of these I was sure to hear the thrushes singing from the top of the basswoods, maples and elms which crowned the hills. The only time the singing was lessened was during the period from noon until about three in the afternoon.

Hermit Is Found

The first evening in camp I heard another thrush the Wilson's or veery. A short distance from our tent was a little aspen copse and from this spot came the twanging harp-like tones of the veery. This thrush's favorite singing time was at sunset, but on warm days we could hear him singing any hour of the day. During the week of the full moon we had several clear nights and then the veery sang late into the night, his voice mingling with that of the whippoorwill.

On the camp ground itself the third of our thrushes, the hermit appeared to be absent but we discovered several pairs in the surrounding woods. One late afternoon several of the coucous, and Walker promised to comb the face of a certain paragrapher with it on sight. . . . Swordfish is in, and the pious are swarming to Gage and Tolner's in Brooklyn.

City Has Least Number of Auto Deaths in 1937

Appleton's Record Rated High By National Safety Council

Based on 100,000 population, Appleton had the smallest number of traffic fatalities, 7.6 persons, of any city of its size in Wisconsin during 1937, according to reports compiled by the National Safety Council. Two persons died in automobile accidents in the city during the year.

Of other Wisconsin cities between 25,000 and 50,000 population, Green Bay had the best record with 10 deaths per 100,000 persons. Green Bay has a population of about 40,000 and four met death in auto accidents. Fond du Lac was next with three deaths and a ratio of 11.1 for every 100,000 persons.

Seven persons were killed in automobiles in Oshkosh during the year giving the city a rating of 16.9 deaths per 100,000 persons while five were killed in Eau Claire giving the city a ratio of 18.4 deaths per 100,000. Superior was high roads and the other two in the swamps. The tone of the hermit is much like that of the veery but instead of the descending spiral of song which the latter bird employs, the hermit's voice rises higher and higher as his song progresses. Of these the hermit appears to be the least common as well as the most retiring, not only in this place but elsewhere in the state.

A sound which thrilled us each time we heard it was the call of the loon, a loud wild cry which we heard most frequently during the early morning hours. A pair of loons spent part of each day on Trump lake, where the camp is situated, and we had ample opportunity to watch them swimming about, sometimes with all but their heads submerged and at other times disappearing entirely under water and then bobbing up again in another part of the lake.

Pileated Woodpecker

At Camp Geokenlaw I saw my first pileated woodpecker, an uncommon bird almost as large as a crow. On several occasions my suspicions as to the bird's presence here had been aroused by the unusually loud tapping of some woodpecker and also by a wild clucking bird, resembling that of the flicker but louder and more ringing.

I consulted Lawrence, the camp owner's son. He had never seen the pileated woodpecker there but promised to investigate any loud tapping or the sound of its call, which I described to him. One morning I heard both the call and the tapping in the trees near the shop. I hurried to the spot and found Lawrence there before me. In a few minutes we located the bird, a female pileated, hitching her way up a bare part of a maple trunk.

Several other interesting bird adventures came my way in this place but these will have to be saved for a later date. In counting the number of birds I had seen there I find that my list shows 62 species. I had made no attempt to get a large number but merely jotted down the names of each new bird I observed in my walks about the place.

Post-Crescent Dad, Son Fishing Week Contest Ends July 5

Either the fishing isn't so good or else you boys need the kind of rod, reel and line the Appleton Post-Crescent and the Appleton chapter of the Isaak Walton league are offering in the Dad and Son Fishing Week contest to see what boy under 17 years of age can catch the biggest fish.

No one has entered a fish in the contest to date so apparently no boy has caught a fish. Or maybe someone hooked one and forgot to enter it in the contest because it wasn't big enough. Well, don't get that idea, enter any kind of fish and maybe your's will be the winner.

The contest closes Tuesday and blanks giving information about the fish must be filed at the Post-Crescent office by Saturday, July 9. Just fill out one of the blanks which appeared in the paper during the last two weeks and have it signed by an adult.

City Has Least Number of Auto Deaths in 1937

Appleton's Record Rated High By National Safety Council

Based on 100,000 population, Appleton had the smallest number of traffic fatalities, 7.6 persons, of any city of its size in Wisconsin during 1937, according to reports compiled by the National Safety Council. Two persons died in automobile accidents in the city during the year.

Of other Wisconsin cities between 25,000 and 50,000 population, Green Bay had the best record with 10 deaths per 100,000 persons. Green Bay has a population of about 40,000 and four met death in auto accidents. Fond du Lac was next with three deaths and a ratio of 11.1 for every 100,000 persons.

Seven persons were killed in automobiles in Oshkosh during the year giving the city a rating of 16.9 deaths per 100,000 persons while five were killed in Eau Claire giving the city a ratio of 18.4 deaths per 100,000. Superior was high

The Dog Owner and His Dog

BY ALLAN KERR

How many prospective hunting dogs, now only in puppyhood, will be ruined for valuable work after a year giving the city a rating of 16.9 deaths per 100,000 persons while five were killed in Eau Claire giving the city a ratio of 18.4 deaths per 100,000. Superior was high

Needless to say, every sportsman who wishes a dog for a hunting companion can not afford to buy one that is thoroughly trained. He must invest in a pup which he knows is from good hunting stock, then train the dog himself. As those who have done this are aware, breaking a gun dog of average temperament and intelligence is job enough in itself, but schooling one that is nervous and noise-shy is a difficult task, and for the novice at least, often impossible.

No doubt you have seen a puppy almost jump out of his skin when someone slammed a car door or dropped a feeding dish on the floor. If someone had not been on hand to soothe the little fellow at the moment, a good start toward a gun-shy dog might have resulted, for in these early impressions that are often the lasting ones.

Better Under Supervision

It is much better to have a pup learn about noises while under supervision. After such experience he will not be bothered nearly as much when confronted by new and strange sounds. Drop a book on the floor while you are petting and talking to him, slam a door or set off the alarm clock any new and unusual sound will do. Sometimes a thunder storm disturbs dogs to the point of making them panicky. Be there to comfort them and little harm should result.

If fire-crackers must be shot off, and if the dog must be near the scene of the shooting, be sure to be there to lend your reassuring influence. If you aren't there, the pup is very apt to dash for the nearest cover where he will lie trembling and conjuring up all sorts of terrible pictures which may not be easy to erase when the time comes to take him to the woods and marshes.

We have all seen children grow from a bogy infested household to timid, frightened youth, and even with seven deaths and a ratio of 19.4 deaths per 100,000. In Wisconsin's largest city, Milwaukee, 65 persons were killed during 1937 placing the city third for all state cities with a ratio of 19.8 deaths per 100,000 persons. In 13 states for which figures were compiled, the average motor vehicle death rate was only 13.7 in 1937 compared to 18.8 in 1928, a reduction of 27 per cent.

after they were old enough to know positively that there was nothing to fear, they were still the pitiful victims of a terrible force of darkness. Let us consider these things when we attempt to raise a hunting dog; or any other kind for that matter.

Sad Sight

To us it is a sad sight indeed, when one of the sporting breeds, brimming over with the natural instinct to hunt, taken to the field in stylish fashion, makes game in a manner befitting the champion that he might have become, only to break for distant hills at the first report of a gun.

It is at times like these that the hunter bemoans the fact that he did not spend a little time breaking his promising pup to the gun. If he is fortunate enough to own a dog that is just naturally bold and fearless, he may tell his hunting pals that worry about gun-shyness is the bunk, but the fellow who has gone through the heart breaking task of trying to correct the fault will tell you an entirely different story.

Manawa Boys Have Complete Camping Trip, Even to Successful Snipe Hunt

BY ALLEN P. WALCH
Manawa—Rollie Vaughan, local recreational director, took a group of some fifteen youngsters to Kill Kare Kabin, Bear Lake, this week to spend a few days in a rather rustic cabin, whose huge porch lent itself to sleeping in quantity lots. The boys ranged in age from 8 to 14 years and for most of them it was their first experience in camping.

Some of the men about town paid them a visit one morning about 7:30 hoping they might be invited in to breakfast. They should have known better. The group leader wearily made the statement that all the lads were awake at 4 o'clock dressed and breakfasted by 5 o'clock. Dishes washed and beds made by 6 o'clock, and some of them were sound asleep again at 7.

Every son's mother of them would have been startled out of a year's growth to have seen the cabin atmosphere. Every dish was washed and in its place. Every bed was made up, ready for the occupants to slip in between the blankets after a hard day's play. The floor was swept, the tables put in order, and the parents of these rising young citizens would undoubtedly be shocked to a faint could they have experienced the sight of the offspring in these previously undiscovered and unknown habits of neatness and cleanliness. Two of the fellows even brought a tooth brush.

Even a Snipe Hunt
Of course, some of the dirt had been swept out of sight under the beds, and there was evidence of breakfast egg on a couple of the recently washed plates but, good gosh, you can't expect everything perfect the first trip. Some of the lads even patched up a pair of iron beds that hadn't seen the light of day for years, and made them not only durable but presentable.

They had their quota of swimming, boating, fishing and working. One of the most successful snipe hunts in the history of that venerable sport was also pulled off. For an hour long after darkness had fallen, three of the lads, Paul Smith, Kenneth Wege and Clayton Hill, averaging about ten years of age, alternated in holding high a huge gummed sack and waving a lantern in the air to attract the snipes before they finally decided that they were the victims of one of the most ancient jokes on record. And it was a long jump through the woods back to the cabin, too, just to hear the raucous comments of their comrades.

"I thought it was a lot of fun, though," one of the lads commented, "and it gave us fellows who aren't old enough to be Boy Scouts a chance to get a little camp life, too."

Others in the party besides those mentioned were Bruce Brown, Bobby Baldwin, Paul Roman, Jr., Ronnie Beck, Dick Beck, Mayford Kosmerchek, Robert Marcy, Wesley Fenske, Howard Marquardt, Floyd Theisen, Bobby Wolter and Bob Beck.

Visit Waupaca Home On Way to Michigan

Waupaca—Fred Touton and daughter Dorothy and son Ray of Edgerton, spent Thursday at the home of Mr. Touton's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Sim Shambau. From Waupaca Ray Touton went to Saso, a town in Michigan, which is located on Lake Superior near Marquette. Here he will enter a boy's summer camp which is owned and operated by his uncle Louis Touton of Kansas City, Mo. Mr. Touton, instructor in mechanical drawing, has directed the camp for the last 28 years, boys coming from all parts of the country to spend their summers year after year under his guidance.

David Shambau left Friday morning with a truck load of saddle horses to be used in the camp. Saddles, bridles and gay colored blankets were a part of the equipment. David will return early next week.

Fred Touton had just returned from Puerto Rico where he has been associated with the American Tobacco company for many years. Mrs. Shambau and daughter Barbara will go to Edgerton Sunday where they will spend a week with Mrs. Shambau's mother, Mrs. Lou Touton, while Mr. Shambau will accompany Dr. W. G. Rudersdorf to Cincinnati where they will be guests of Robert Crockett, formerly of Waupaca. Enroute they will pick up David Kenyon of Oakfield and Claude Knight of Madison. July 6 the men will attend the All-Stars game which is being held in Cincinnati.

New London—In one inning last night the New London Candy Girls amassed enough runs to turn back the invading Appleton girls, 6 to 5, and knot the position for second place in the league. The visitors ran up their tally in two innings.

The Candy girls' batted around in the second inning as Sherry Laux of Appleton walked the first batter up, followed by five consecutive 1-base hits interrupted only by two put-outs. The last batter popped out.

Appleton scored first in the opening frame getting three markers on two hits and a walk. They repeated in the third but tallied only two runs.

Schoenke on mound
Mildred Schoenke, on the mound for New London, fanned 11 sluggers. Laux stopped 4. Schoenke walked three, Laux 2.

Oertel's triple and Schoenke's double were the only extra-base hits for both squads. Few runners got on bases after the third inning though efforts for an extra run kept both sides working hard and full of excitement. A wet infield caused trouble and during the last half batters nearly became mired in mud around the plate.

In a 5-inning preliminary game between City Industrial league teams, Hamiltons Local 1107 got revenge on the Mystery Boys by a victory of 4 to 3. Pitcher Kenneth Ross walked in the winning run in the last inning with the bases loaded. The Mystery Boys got 7 hits to the Locals 4 but Russell White got good support.

Vaccination Clinics Scheduled Next Week

Waupaca—Vaccination clinics are to be held at Embarras July 5, at Big Falls July 6 and Ogdensburg July 8, for children from six months to six years of age. A small fee is being charged for immunization from smallpox and diphtheria. July 27 is the date set for the second injection of diphtheria toxoid for Waupaca children, the smallpox vaccine also being given on that date. Any child who had been given a dose of toxoid before the program started may receive another to establish a more permanent protection.

The fifth of the series of twelve vaccination clinics held in the county which was held in Waupaca this week was the most successful to date, 68 infants receiving the vaccination.

Miss Estelle Junz, Waupaca county nurse, said it is difficult to understand why more people wait until the child is of school age before giving the immunizing agents when almost one-half of the deaths from diphtheria occur at the pre-school period. These are diseases no child needs to have.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN AT GETTYSBURG

For a generation after Gettysburg was lost to Lee both sides indulged in protracted speculation, some fanciful and some practical, concerning What Might Have Been, for certainly sound and convincing arguments could be advanced to make impartial men believe that Lee might have swept that field with victory and marched on triumphantly to the country's capital.

The analysis of these reasons emphasizes forevermore the importance of leadership in battle, the necessity for hide-bound discipline, and the critical importance of the responsible person assuming the responsibility of making incisive decisions and enforcing obedience to the letter.

We must brush aside Lee's magnanimous statement in reference to the defeat that "I am alone to blame." Even his report to the Confederate president must be read in the light of known facts:

"The conduct of the troops was all that I could desire or expect, and they deserved success so far as it can be deserved by heroic valor and fortitude. More may have been required of them than they were able to perform. . . .

"I know how prone we are to censor and how ready to blame others for the non-fulfillment of their expectations. This is unbecoming in a generous people, and I grieve to see its expression."

Nevertheless General Lee wrote two other statements at later times that are important. To Maryland's governor he said:

"General Longstreet, when once in a fight, was a most brilliant soldier; but he was the hardest man to move I had in my army."

Of General Jackson who had been killed at Chancellorsville only a few months before the invasion of the north was planned, General Lee wrote:

"If I had had Stonewall Jackson with me, so far as man can see, I should have won the battle of Gettysburg, and we should have established the independence of the confederacy."

The admitted facts of what transpired, the moodiness and sulkeness of Longstreet because his plan of battle was not accepted, and his long delay in getting into action all support the southern thesis that the confederacy was lost on that dark night when Jackson was shot.

At the council that planned the march into Pennsylvania Lee and Longstreet had agreed up to the point of the action to be undertaken when they met the Union army. Lee was for offensive action, Longstreet proposed a long and involved plan of battle, a sort of hit and run, damage and disappear, campaign. The merits of the argument may be dismissed because Lee was commander-in-chief and he, upon full consideration, decided against Longstreet.

Shortly after Ewell's corps collided with the advance of the Union army Lee and Longstreet were together for the purpose of actually settling upon the field of battle. The first day had marked an auspicious opening for the Rebels. They had 5,000 Union prisoners and almost as many Union casualties lay upon the ground.

Lee directed Longstreet to take Cemetery Hill, Little Round Top and Big Little Top. The advantage in holding these points was evident. Longstreet not only delayed but, worse still, probably delayed because he was wholly out of sympathy with Lee's plan of battle.

But General Meade, in command of the Union troops, also saw the critical advantage of the selfsame positions. Gettysburg in fact turns upon the race between Meade and Longstreet to take the high ground. And Meade was the hare, Longstreet the tortoise. When, after numerous excuses and delay, the assaults against those spots made deathlessly famous in American history was undertaken by the South, Meade had them well packed with artillery, some of his best fighting men, seasoned veterans, thousands of them from our own Wisconsin, and the onslaughts hurled against them were turned back as are mighty waves that dash and break upon a rockbound coast.

And yet a share for the miscarriage of the battle from the southern standpoint must be borne by Lee. It had never been Lee's custom to treat his Lieutenant Generals as he might a staff aide. He gave them large discretion, a dangerous thing to do when he knew the discretion might be abused. It probably never occurred to Lee that Longstreet would make his chief's usual deference a justification for delaying a movement because he heartily disapproved of it. Generals who eat their hearts out in resentment at the rejection of some plan considered superior by them and particularly if of their own creation, become temporarily menaces to any army. They provide that human equation which makes all battles uncertain.

Here then was a situation that did not depend upon long wagon trains groaning under their loads of food or ammunition, nor valor, strategy nor the weight of numbers, but was determined by the commander-in-chief's characteristic of dealing kindly and leniently with the opinions of his corps commanders, and the burning inflammation in the heart of one of those corps commanders who dallied along while Meade with fine speed and finer discipline took the heights that were to control the battle.

And with the battle, the war.

THE SWAG IS PUBLIC OFFICE

About 500,000 WPA workers in the south have received wage increases ranging from 4 to 11 dollars per month. The highest increases were doled out in Kentucky and Oklahoma where the New Deal faces important primaries.

Aubrey Williams, Mr. Hopkins' first lieutenant, addressing WPA workers and their representatives, advised them to "keep your friends in power." At least Mr. Williams is candid.

The direct use of government money to benefit the administration in power is thus made unusually evident.

When Mr. Hopkins fires a couple of straw bosses for talking too much politics, as though the WPA were conducted on known political grounds, he only emphasizes the really rank condition into which the entire affair has drifted.

In the language of Richard Croker, greatest of Tammany business boodlers, "Well, what are you going to do about it?"

Judging the fire by many evidences of soot and smoke the action of the administration in using government funds for its own political campaign is probably the most filthy and corrupt experience the country has gone through.

But to get definitely the facts is impossible so long as the administration refuses to permit an investigation into its affairs.

In this respect it is highly autocratic. It is actually czarist where the Republicans when in power were liberal.

It should not be forgotten that the Teapot Dome investigation, all the wretched doings of Doheny, Sinclair and associates, were opened up by a Republican congress in which the administration had a majority as great as the Roosevelt administration has today.

So, upon this matter at least, the Roosevelt administration is highly reactionary. It is protecting the boodlers.

MR. ECCLES GAINS HALF A POINT

The dispute that was brought to the surface between Mr. Eccles of the Federal Reserve with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation on the one hand and the Comptroller of the Currency on the other concerning the standards to be observed by bank examiners in judging bank loans and investments has been settled, we are informed, by compromise.

Mr. Eccles thus makes some headway. But he does not make all the headway he should have made and which the administration could secure for him were it so minded.

Mr. Eccles, however, should be thanked for making public the duplicity of various departments of the government, one of which broadcasts its denunciation of bankers for not being more liberal with their funds while the others grab the bankers by the collar and instruct them to the exact contrary.

A Verse for Today

SOMETHING OF HIM REMAINS
(For Mrs. J. S.)

Something of him remains when summer comes. Although he is so very far away. We tend his roses and delphiniums. And all the flowers he cherished yesterday. Upon the trees he loved, our glances stray. And we are lonely for him when we hear The birds he fed sing a glad roundelay. And his pet squirrel comes begging, without fear.

Something of him remains in this tall boy Who was so very dear to him who keeps A solemn tryst with Death. . . . He would enjoy This young intelligence that burns and leaps Into fresh growth, while one who loves him Sleeps.

Grief casts a shadow on the leafy lanes. But there is comfort for each one who weeps: Something of him, upon this earth, remains. (Copyright, 1938)

Dale Harrison's In Old New York

New York—Whenever a writer feels literally hellish, he generally looks around, finds a great big public utility to pick on, and starts swinging verbal lefts and rights.

My sparring partner for today is the New York Central railroad. It is my purpose to belabor it in the matter of rugs and redcaps. I shall sting it with a jab or two and perhaps belt it a bit about the midriff, but at the end I shall extend my hand in friendship and brotherly love. I don't have to. It's just a huge corporation, and anyone's got a right to belabor a corporation. But let's be fair.

Round One: When a passenger boards the new deluxe Twentieth Century Limited at Grand Central station, he treads from waiting room to Pullman on carpet, King-and-queen stuff, fanfare-and-drum-roll business. Very spiffy.

I do not object to the carpet. I'm broad minded. Carrels or concrete—I can take 'em or leave 'em alone! But—

When the passenger comes home on the Century, he runs into a strained atmosphere. Up the river at Harmon, where the New York Central changes from steam to electric locomotives, the incoming Century catches up with the slower "Commodore Vanderbilt," and loafs into town behind it.

This irks. Having paid an extra fare for "special service," the Century passenger feels crestfallen to find himself rolling into Grand Central behind the plebeian "Vanderbilt."

Round Two: The two trains pull into Grand Central station about a minute or two apart, the aristocratic Century crawling in behind, like a little puppy who has done something naughty and is ashamed of itself.

Generally the trains arrive on parallel tracks, one on one side of a platform, the other just across from it, with only the platform between. The redcaps make a rush for the first train in—the Commodore Vanderbilt. They have learned from long experience that a Vanderbilt passenger tips just as promptly and liberally as anybody else.

By the time the haughty Century arrives, all the redcaps are marching triumphantly away with bags and baggage from the Vanderbilt. The Century passengers are left, in a manner of speaking, holding the bag.

The Century passenger is not the type of traveler to make the long trek up the ramp (and no carpet now, either) lugging his own luggage. He is not the brawny type. Besides, it doesn't look just right. He's paid his extra fare, and what does he finish up with? Not even a carpet!

Round Three: I spoke to a man with brass buttons on a said: "This is a pretty howdy-do." He said: "Well, that's a redcap for you. No judgment."

My thought is that the New York Central with its streamlining, its carpet and haughty airs—and then letting the customers lug their own luggage wearily from train to taxicab, isn't using much judgment, either.

FLASH!!! Harrison wins in third round by a knockout!

The National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, with headquarters in New York, has been telling people to be careful, and it turns out the Bureau wasn't any too careful itself.

The Bureau has been conducting an extensive newspaper advertising campaign the theme of which is that safe driving is worth money. The 32 companies which make up the Bureau have a plan under which a reward of 15 per cent of a year's liability premium is given drivers of private cars who do not have any loss under their policy during the year.

One of the newspaper ads was built around a cartoon showing Mr. Safe Driver, his car parked at the curb, receiving a check from his insurance agent. Hardly had the ads appeared, however, until letters began raining into the Bureau's offices here. All read something like this: "How can that be called a Safe Driver when his car is parked—on the wrong side of the street?"

The letterwriters were tight. But you can't tease an ad-writer. Confronted with his faux pas, the ad-writer waved his hand airily and said: "Why, that's all right. It's a one-way street."

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—In spite of all these spy stories, the War and Navy buildings are not the most carefully watched buildings in Washington.

Most guarded is the Federal Reserve building.

One afternoon, just to be a little bit, we walked through the Navy building, down one corridor and into another, and then toured the Army's in addition. Not once were we stopped, or even eyed, so far as we could tell. But when we crossed Constitution avenue and entered the Federal Reserve building a guard stopped us in the first 20 feet.

Nothing gruff about the guards. They are pleasant enough young fellows, dressed in dark blue uniforms with a nick or two of braid. "Can I help you?" said Guard Number One.

"I have an appointment."

"With whom, please?"

So we told him. He passed us through and we went up to the second floor, heading for an office we had visited repeatedly before.

Guard Number Two

We were winning, confidently, along when another guard nailed us. By that time we were a bit subdued by the magnificence of it all, for of all the buildings in Washington the Federal Reserve makes us feel most acutely the "grandeur that was Rome"—or was it Greece?

The second guard snared us in a little circular hallway from which passages led in several directions. "Are you looking for someone?"

Guard Number Two asked us.

He was taking no chances but plunked himself smack in front of us. We named our name as well as the name of the man we came to see. All these he telephoned some place or other and then told us politely to wait five minutes in a side room.

That side room, for casual guests, is a president's suite all by itself. You sink to your arms (well, almost) in the rug and look through a tall window into a garden. There are several red leather chairs and a long couch and a fireplace with three logs in it that never are lighted so far as we could tell. The place is air conditioned. In the back of the fireplace is a metal seal saying: "Board of Governors Federal Reserve System."

Why, Mr. Grover?

There are polished ash trays here and there and new pads of matches by each one. We have been in the room several times but never once have seen any ashes in a tray to indicate somebody was nonchalant enough to smoke there. We weren't, but snatched a pack of matches, for a souvenir.

Presently the guard came for us with a "this way, please." We thought we would be allowed to take the next 10 steps to our goal without company, but that was a mistake. Guard Number Two preceded us, a Negro attendant who showed us the doorway down a marble lined hallway behind which was our man.

Inside was a tall blonde secretary and we heaved a sigh of relief. She didn't seem upset at our experiences. She never seems upset, in fact is just as imperturbable as the whole federal reserve system.

The strange part of it is that when you get into the place you can't even cash a check. There isn't a dime of bank money in the building.

Your Birthday

"CANCER"

If July 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:45 a. m. to 1:45 p. m. from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 9:45 to 10:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m.; from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. until midnight.

It will be poor judgment to express your opinion in too forceful a manner and advisable to defer as much as possible to the wishes of other people this day. Cooperation will be essential to obtaining satisfactory results, particularly in promoting social activities. Self-indulgence will be responsible for indisposition. In the carrying out of personal plans this day, haste will fail to accomplish what deliberation is apt to make possible. This is a poor day to impose any kind of a strain on the tempers of friends and relatives. Married and engaged couples, as well as those who are about to become engaged, must be careful not to let jealousy be a disturbing influence this day.

If a woman and July 3 is your birthday, you are apt to be very impulsive, sympathetic and romantic. Ambition may lead you to a very profitable professional or business connection. One of the arts, perhaps, music, may be the cause of your attracting flattering attention. You should have exceptionally fine reasoning powers. Your ability to make and save money will serve you well throughout your life. An excessive amount of pride might be one of your handicaps. By playing a musical instrument, singing, dancing, newspaper work, acting or selling, you may become very prosperous. The indications are that you will be very fortunate in your selection of a husband.

The child born on July 3, is frequently extremely fastidious, particularly in regard to wearing apparel. Neatness most likely will be one of this youngster's outstanding characteristics. Children born on this date are generally very lucky, and select for a career activities abounding in opportunities to make money and a good reputation.

If a man and July 3 is your natal day, if you live within your means and avoid ostentatious display, you should have no difficulty in realizing your most ambitious dreams. As a chemist, engineer, actor, artist,

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

CRAZE FOR SURGERY

A reader, punctured my pride in the new word, cri, which I thought I had invented, by pointing out that it is really an old familiar word in French, meaning cry, vague or fashion—as in the phrase crier derrière.

Fad, vogue, craze, however, is a typical Yankee custom. Needless to cite the constant succession of popular crazes. But medicine, too, is subject to crazes, and notably surgery.

If you are old enough to remember the craze for cutting a bone out of the nose, back in the gay nineties and the early year of the twentieth century you know that it was followed by the craze for snoring and guillotining tonsils and adenoids which raged among the nose and throat specialists and even among the general practitioners for several years before the craze was a time when a bored youngster could scarcely say "Huh?" and look dull or uninterested in what the teacher was talking about, without grave risk of being rushed to a clinic to have his larynx and adenoids removed. Actually some Yankee specialists, doing a wholesale business via the clinic racket, had school teachers, social service workers and similar runners tagging children and herding them to the clinic for removal of tonsils and adenoids, on the mere snap diagnosis of the teacher, nurse or other incompetent person who observed what the nose and throat specialists of the day called the "adenoid face"—that is, a dull, open-mouthed, listless expression.

To be sure, such an expression may sometimes accompany hypertrophy or enlargement of adenoid tissue in nose or throat, but it stands to the everlasting shame of American medicine that during the tonsil and adenoid craze countless children were herded thru such operations in wholesale fashion without the formality of even an examination of the throat by a competent physician before the anesthesia.

Even if the health authorities never recognize or accept my teachings concerning the prevention of the common respiratory infections (which account for most of the illness physicians attend), much less the connotation of the cri, I shall still take pride in the part I have played in educating the public about the golden rule of hygiene and in warning the public against wholesale tonsil snatching.

William Cast as District Attorney

"Wives Under Suspicion" Coming to Rio Theater Next Week

With Warren William and Gail Patrick in the leading roles, Universal's "Wives Under Suspicion" depicting the soul regeneration of a merciless district attorney, comes to the Rio Theater on Wednesday and Thursday.

This picture, in which tragedy, despair and poignant romance alternate in rapid succession bares the amazing mental changes that take place when a public prosecutor forsakes humanitarian instincts in his feverish desire for convictions.

Warren William is cast as the district attorney in this Edmund Grainger production. Miss Patrick is the wife whose love gradually turns to hate when she sees her mate daily becoming more savage and relentless.

Constance Moore is given her first outstanding role as the lovely young girl who is determined to "get her man," a feather-headed college boy, at any price. William Haggan plays the elusive, heart-breaking romantic lead.

"We're Going to Be Rich," a surprising, different and thoroughly enjoyable picture, and the added feature on the same program, introduces Gracie Fields, a new star, to the screen.

With Victor McLaglen, one of our favorite men, in his finest role as a somewhat irresponsible devotee of the "get-rich-quick" idea of getting on in the world—and with Gracie Fields as his showgirl wife, "We're Going to Be Rich" presents a broad, lusty story of life in Australia and South Africa.

These two stars, Victor and Miss Fields, are set in two points of a triangle which is completed by Brian Donlevy in the principle featured role.

Dick Foran Plays Lead in Gripping Melodrama

"Over The Wall," a gripping melodrama of a man falsely imprisoned for murder and his subsequent rise to fame by means of a beautiful singing voice, will be the feature attraction starting Wednesday, July 6 at the Appleton theater and will be shown for three days.

Starring Dick Foran, popular Warner Bros. star recently transferred from westerns, the picture's low element is supplied by June Travis, one of the loveliest leading ladies in Hollywood today.

Written by Warden E. Lawes of Sing Sing, the story is one which smacks of real life and high drama with plenty of punch provided in the right places.

The story has an unusual twist in the fact that Dick, who capably plays the lead, literally sings his way out of prison, after he has been incarcerated on a lamppost. Bitter against all except his sweet heart, the lovely June Travis, he soon becomes an incorrigible. With the aid of a tough but kindly prison chaplain ably portrayed by the versatile John Littel, Foran joins the prison choir broadcast over the air, Foran soon gains a tremendous following. From then on the story gains in interest until a thrilling climax.

Dick Foran sings two great tunes in the picture, with one especially, "One More Tomorrow," sounding like a hit.

The second feature on this program is "Lady Behave," starring Sally Eilers and Neil Hamilton. The story deals with a lady's adventures in extricating her madcap sister from a marriage tangle. Sally Eilers is the misbehaving lady and Neil Hamilton supplies the male love interest.

"Little Caesar" Is In Gangster Farce

A new era dawn! Gangsterism, as a theme for motion pictures, has finally reached the stage where it can be kidded.

That's what happens in "A Slight Case of Murder," a gaily hilarious burlesque from the studios of Warner Bros., which is showing at the Elite theater today and Sunday.

Curiously, the star of this farce is the same man who first established the gangster-racketeer as a familiar screen figure—Edward G. Robinson, who years ago was the menacing "Little Caesar" and who carried on through various underworld pictures right down to "The Last Gangster."

There are shootings in "A Slight Case of Murder," of course. In fact, four gangsters of various degrees of wickedness bite the dust. But the killings are so ludicrous that they bring laughs instead of gasps.

The picture is an adaptation of the successful stage play of the same name by Damon Runyon and Howard Lindsay, and their "characters" of the nether-world are always funny, whether they're playing the rascals or being rubbed out by their enemies.

The game of golf is possibly of Dutch origin.

HEPBURN GOES MODERN IN COMEDY

A new Katharine Hepburn, glowingly human, gloriously modern! Defying the conventional world of society because she's in love! A new Cary Grant, his madcap humor bubbling beneath the weight of a career he wants to discard! A blue-blooded girl and a red-blooded boy prove that what the world needs is a bigger and better "Holiday." The production of Philip Barry's brilliant stage comedy-romance opens Saturday July 9 at the Appleton Theatre for 4-days. In addition to the co-stars Hepburn and Grant, the "Holiday" cast includes Edward E. Horton, Binnie Barnes, Jean Dixon, Doris Nolan and Lew Ayres.

The co-feature, "Air Devils," is a dramatic thriller of love, battle royal, adventure and comedy on a South Sea island. Larry Blake, Dick Purcell, Beryl Wallace and Mamie Clark have the featured roles.

"Three Comrades" to Show Over Holidays

Specially booked for the holidays, the Rio Theater is currently featuring a gigantic triple hit program. The unusual entertainment combination will play thru Tuesday.

From the pen of the author of "All Quiet on the Western Front" comes another gripping screen story, this time a narrative in which a nation's woes after the World War are overshadowed by one of the most human love stories to reach the screen.

In the new picture, "Three Comrades," Robert Taylor and Margaret Sullivan provide a poignant romance, with Franchot Tone and Robert Young, also in stellar roles, adding performances which will remain long in the memory of the moviegoer.

The story, based on Erich Maria Remarque's widely-read novel, centers about Taylor, Tone and Young, three young veterans who face a chaotic future together in a country gripped by disturbances.

The most mysterious mystery has neither clues nor suspects, but the added feature on this program, "One Wild Night" doesn't even have a victim! It does have shots, shrieks, clutchy hands, trapdoors, sleuthing sweeties and a flock of laughs, provided by Dick Baldwin, June Lang, Lyle Talbot and Sidney Toler.

The third attraction on the bill is "Every Sunday," a musical tabloid starring Deanna Durbin and Judy Garland.

Marriage Market Shows Slump From 1937 Level

There was a decided slump in June marriages in Appleton and vicinity this summer compared to a year ago, according to the figures on marriage licenses issued today from the office of John E. Hantschel, county clerk.

A year ago, 101 licenses were issued in June. Last month the office had calls for only 72.

Farce-Comedy Will Show At Elite Monday And Tuesday

"Swing Your Lady," a Warner Bros. farce-comedy dealing with life among the hillbillies of the Ozarks, will be the feature attraction at the Elite Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, Bargain Days.

The story has to do with a champion wrestler and his entourage who get stranded in a hill hamlet. The wrestler, to get them out, has to take on a match with a local "ground-scuttler," and this battle is said to be one of the funniest things thrown on a screen this season.

It's more or less on the level, too, because the wrestling champ is none other than Nat Pendleton, the actor who at one time held the Olympic heavyweight title, and the hillbilly is Dan'l Boone Savage, the picturesque, bewhiskered strong man well known in the current grunt and groan racket.

Humphrey Bogart plays Pendleton's manager, Frank McHugh is his trainer, Penny Singleton is Bogart's heart interest, Louise Fazenda is a lady blacksmith, and the famed vaudeville team of the Weaver Brothers and Elvira are hillbillies.

Panay Officers and Men Honored by Navy

Washington —(7)—The navy honored with decorations and citations today 24 officers and men of the gunboat Panay, bombed and sunk by the Japanese last Dec. 12.

Secretary Swanson addressed a letter of appreciation to Lieutenant Commander James J. Hughes, wounded while in command of the Yangtze river patrol boat.

In the name of President Roosevelt, Swanson awarded the navy cross to two other officers and 21 enlisted men.

"For extraordinary heroism" as executive officer, the cross was given Lieutenant Arthur F. Anders of Weimar, Texas, who gave orders in writing after he was wounded in the throat.

The decoration was awarded Lieutenant Clark C. Grazier of the medical corps, for "distinguished service." His home is Ingomar, Pa.

Robert Raymond Hebard, water tender second class, Friendship, Wis., was among the enlisted men.

Asks Reconsideration Of Ruling for Ekern

Madison —(7)—Attorney William B. Rubin, Milwaukee, asked the state supreme court Friday to reconsider its decision that Herman L. Ekern legally holds the office of lieutenant governor.

The court ruled June 20 that Governor LaFollette had constitutional and statutory power to appoint Ekern as successor to Henry Gunderson, Portage, who resigned last fall to accept membership on the state tax commission.

Acting on behalf of James Martin, Thiensville, taxpayer, Rubin challenged the legality of the appointment.

Under court rules Rubin and Ekern's attorneys have until July 25 to file briefs on the motion for rehearing. The court is scheduled to go on its summer vacation soon and there was no indication when it would act on the motion.

PUBLIC HEARING

A public hearing on several zoning changes will be conducted at 7:30 Tuesday evening in city hall. The hearing will be conducted by the ordinance committee of the common council.

"Josette" Starts Today at Appleton

Simone Simon, Don Ameche, Robert Young, Stud Star Cast

With three delightful stars such as Simone Simon, Don Ameche and Robert Young, the "oo-la-la-laughingest" escapade in the History of Love, 20th Century Fox's ray comedy hit, "Josette," starts today at the Appleton Theatre for a 4-day showing.

This spicy, tantalizing story is gayer than a Mardi Gras, with these three delightful stars. Don is more romantic than you've known him on screen or radio. Simone is the tantalizing little French coquette. She's got 'em! And she's got 'em! And Bob is the ardent swain who won't take no for an answer—not even in French.

It all starts gaily on its way when Don and Bob decide that their Papa is too ardently cherishing la femme-Josette. The fact that Simone is innocent of all guile as regards Papa—and that there is another woman in the case—only adds to the merry madness. For Don and Bob pack Papa off on a trip and decide to take Josette into their own hands... or arms, as it later develops.

Three new song hits by Hollywood's ace tunesmiths are featured in the musical background of the film. These, which already are crowding the kilocycles, are "May I Drop a Petal in Your Glass of Wine?" "In Any Language" and "Where In The World."

Bert Lahr and Joan Davis, sensational new comedy team first seen in "Love And Hisses," head the featured cast of "Josette."

Paul Hurst, William Collier, Sr. and Tala Birell are included in the cast.

The second feature on this program is "Gangs of New York," featuring Charles Bickford, Alan Baxter and Ann Dvorak.

"Gangs of New York" is a fast moving story of the activities of the police as they attempt to round up a gang of notorious criminals who have been operating for years immune to the law.

Henderson, Ky. —(7)—Police acted on an 1888 statute when they charged Bill Ligon, Negro, the other day with "reckless driving with a horse and cart."

Send Credits of 12 Pupils to Colleges

Terrier "Kidnaps" Three Kittens From Pennsylvania Home

Philadelphia —(7)—Nipper, a tiny fox terrier, jealously guarded today three kittens she "kidnaped" from a nearby house.

She squeezed through her privy gate swinging panel in a rear screen door last Sunday and stole the kittens while her master, Louis Abrams was away.

Carrying them gently in her mouth she brought them home—one by one—and placed them in a living room chair.

There Abrams found her. And there she has remained since, scolding food and all visitors.

So jealously does she guard her adopted charges, Abrams said, that she bit two of his children when they ventured too close.

Cold Weather, Scum on Lake Cuts Attendance at Beach

Neenah—Cold weather and scum on the water of Lake Winnebago cut the attendance at the municipal bathing beach during June, the first month of the swimming season, according to Ole Jorgensen, supervisor, who reported that there were 5,431 persons in swimming during the month.

The green scum on the water lasted only a short time, Jorgensen reported, but it was during the warmest part of the month. The water has cleared now, however. Jorgensen pointed out that next summer when the swimming pool will be in use, inconvenience of unclean water will be eliminated. During the recent contamination, it was reported that several of the children contracted the hives. That will be entirely obliterated with a swimming pool for the water in the pool will be continuously circulated as well as chlorinated.

The city guards did little rescue work during the month, only six persons requiring aid and none of these cases were serious. First aid was given to 16 other bathers. Jorgensen's report showed that 2,917 boys and 1,647 girls used bath house facilities while more than 867 dressed at home.

Most of the rescues occurred when swimmers not acquainted with the depth of the water jumped off the pier into water over their head. Although they could swim, the shock caused them to swallow water and become frantic.

In Kiowa county there were 18 women prisoners last year but not a single man.

An Early Description

When the work began of reclaiming the narrow strip of sandy beach between the Atlantic and mainland sounds, the area from Curruth to Point Lookout had been largely a barren, windy, wave-scarred stretch.

It bore little resemblance to a primeval picture drawn by an early chronicler who described the dunes as "so full of grapes" as the very beating and surge of the sea overflooded them, climbing towards the top of the high cedars, and I think that in all the world like abundance is not to be found."

Kill Devil Hill Saved
When white settlers came, they cut the wood for fuel and timber. Wild cattle and ponies grazed on the grass, and the banks were laid wide open to the wind and waves.

Devastation went on until the government found it would have to moor down the rapidly shifting Kill Devil hill to erect its imposing memorial tower honoring the Wright brothers for their first airplane flight. A thick matting of grass and shrubbery was induced to grow in the sandy soil, and Kill Devil hill has not budged since.

Emanuel J. Byrum, an old saw-mill man who landed on Cape Hatteras in 1934 to establish a CCC camp, made a similar discovery. He learned that by putting down brush on the beach, the sea could be made to bring back the soil it had stolen.

Brush fences are erected to catch deposits from the sea and layer after layer is added until the surface has been built back. Grass and dogwood trees then are planted to save the soil from new raids of the waves.

CCC Crews Plant Shrubs to Anchor Coast of Carolina

Hatteras, N. C. — (P) — Along side the "Graveyard of the Atlantic," more than 700 CCC boys are tying down North Carolina's roving outer banks with brush, grass and shrubbery.

In the wind and spray of the Atlantic, they are working on a National Park Service project to restore the historic island fringe to a state similar to that the first white men found there. Their territory extends from Kitty Hawk, down by Nags Head and Hatteras, to Ocracoke.

When their work is done, a picturesque coastal park is to be created under a recent act of congress. A paradise of hunting, fishing, bathing and other sports will be opened to thousands of outdoor pleasure seekers.

Those who go there will be on the rim of an untamed ocean known and feared as the "Graveyard of Ships." Treacherous shoals and currents have taken a steady toll there ever since sea-borne traffic found the shore route.

Hearth Flame Is Kept Burning for 147-Year-Period

Mountaineer, 77, Is Last of Family Tending Unusual Fire

Hendersonville, N. C.—In a tiny mountain cabin near here, alone except for his dog, Robert Morris, 77, faithfully tends a fire started by members of his family five generations ago and hopes that before his death arrangements will be made to keep alive forever the flame that has been burning for 147 years.

The aged mountaineer is the last of the Morris family, descendants of a brother of William Morris, who during the Revolutionary War gave all his wealth to the Colonies and died in a pauper's prison. He has never married, and knows that when he dies there will be no son or other relative to take over the task of keeping the fire burning.

That task fell to him more than 20 years ago, when his mother died. Her death-bed exhortation was to "keep the fire going," and he has carried out the wish.

Pioneers in Great Smokies

Ancestors of Morris were among the first white settlers of this Great Smoky Mountain region. Matches were unknown and the building of a fire was a laborious process, accomplished only by rubbing two sticks together or by use of flint and steel. Once a fire was kindled it was carefully guarded and not allowed to go out.

As members of the Morris family married and established their own homes, they carried embers from the family hearth to start their own fires. Thus, when the parents of William Morris moved to their cabin in Holbert Cove, near Hendersonville, they carried embers from their parents' fire to the log hut where it now burns.

Necessity kept the fire burning for many years, and by the time modern habits—and matches—had been accepted in the mountains, the fire had become a tradition, to be carefully guarded.

The blaze burns in a granite fireplace in the little cabin. The fireplace bears the date 1879, but it was built especially for the fire long after the cabin itself was constructed. Banked carefully during the day while its aged guardian is tending his livestock and a few chickens, the blaze is allowed to flame up brightly at night.

Had 10-Months Schooling

Tall and spare, William Morris is a typical citizen of the mountain region where he has spent his entire life. His education was limited to about 10 months in a tiny nearby church, but among outsiders he is quiet and dignified. He speaks with a low, firm voice and appears reserved except with his mountain friends.

An ambition of his youth to leave the mountain country for good soon vanished, and he has never remained away from his cabin for any length of time. He went to New York last year to appear on a radio program, and the visit resulted in the one concession to modernity to be found in the cabin—a radio receiving set.

Plans of individuals and organizations to preserve the fire after the death of its last ancestral keeper already have crystallized in a letter by the North Carolina Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution to the museum division of the National Park Service. The D.A.R. has asked that the fire be moved to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park and preserved as a memorial, with William Morris as caretaker as long as he lives. After his death another caretaker would be appointed.

Woman Given Divorce On Charge of Cruelty

The woman was granted $16 a month for support of one child. The couple was married March 18, 1935, and separated in April of this year.

Log Cabins Stand As Reminders of 1856 Indian Pact

Mark Location of General Hartney's Troops in South Dakota

Pierre, S. D. — Two abandoned log cabins still remain on historic Peoria Bottom, 12 miles north of here, as reminders of the site where a part of Gen. W. S. Hartney's troops camped during the winter of 1855-56 — just prior to the general's famous treaty with the Teton and Yankton Sioux at Fort Pierre the following spring.

One cabin was used as a dwelling by Yellow Hawk, noted Sans Arc chieftain, and later utilized by a farmer as a shed for several years. Named for the "Peoria Belle," a steamboat that was crushed in the ice of the Missouri river near there, the bottom also is the site of a large village of Arikara Indians who lived there more than a century ago.

Following the winter of 1855-56, General Hartney held a conference with the Indians at Ft. Pierre in an effort to induce them to stop molesting travelers on the California trail during the gold rush days. When the treaty was concluded, it was agreed that 11 chiefs from each band, together with what braves were needed, would do police duty along the trail. The plan was new, sounded feasible, but never was ratified by the government.

Across the river from Peoria bottom is Shanty creek—commonly called "Shanty" creek. The area around the mouth of this little stream was dubbed the "navy yard," because considerable timber was cut there and floated down the river to be used for construction work at Ft. Pierre.

Propellers Put On Front of New Boats in Germany

Demonstrate Revolutionary Type of Craft For Canal Travel

Mannheim, Germany — Trial runs here of a new river craft, with propellers in the bow instead of the stern, indicate the boat may revolutionize shipping on canals and small rivers.

Steadily increasing speed of river and canal craft has been a source of constant worry to authorities in charge of the waterways.

Narrow canals and rivers have suffered from fast craft because suction, created by waves formed by these boats, damage the embankments and river beds.

So far no remedy had been found except reduction of speed, a step, however, which is not economical because only part of the boat's engine power is utilized.

The newly constructed vessel, measuring approximately 220 feet in length and driven by two Diesel engines of 135 horsepower each, has eliminated these difficulties. It goes through the water like a fish, its constructors say.

This is made possible, it is explained, by placing the two propellers at the bow, thereby securing a pulling power instead of the usual pushing force.

Furthermore, the two propellers run in steel cylinders—the so-called Kortscue Duesse—with an extended diameter at front. This construction not only eliminates all wave formation, but creates additional pressure, thereby increasing the effectiveness of the propellers, it was asserted.

Trial trips conducted on the Neckar Canal under critical eyes of the canal authorities proved the boat traveling at a speed of seven-and-a-half miles an hour—more than twice the canal speed limit—did not produce any waves.

Over Third of Unmarried Mothers In State Come From Broken Homes

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—Nearly one half of all known illegitimate mothers in Wisconsin were or are employed as domestics, according to a new study by Dorothy Waite of the juvenile department of the state board of control prepared for the board.

One fifth, or the next largest proportion of illegitimate mothers are living at home with their parents, and are unemployed. Miss Waite's study reveals, while the next largest groups of unmarried mothers are students, factory workers, clerks and office workers, waitresses, stenographers, and teachers. Other fields contribute only minor numbers, it was disclosed.

Among other facts disclosed by the new study of illegitimacy in Wisconsin is that the mother is generally between the ages of 15 and 24. Mentally the mothers are about average or dull normal; education usually is completed at the eighth grade, and "a considerable number can be definitely classed as feeble-minded."

Few Have Records

"In the cases of younger unmarried mothers, the records show that the majority have not been known to have criminal careers of former records of delinquency. However, the older unmarried mother reported to us have frequently been known to have past records of law offenses," Miss Waite disclosed.

The study also observed that "there is a certain social heritage and background of sexual offenders that is essentially the same as that of other offenders; female sex offenders have much the same background of unfortunate heredity, mental abnormality, ignorant and sometimes vicious parentage, underprivileged childhood, as other offenders."

"We must therefore be more concerned with community forces making for delinquency and the agencies calculated to reduce it."

Miss Waite cited statistics to show that more than a third of unmarried mothers come from broken homes.

Lower Rate
She also reported that Wisconsin's rate of illegitimacy is more than one-third lower than that for the nation as a whole, 37.6 births per year per 100,000 population, compared with 68.2 for the nation, according to latest figures. Figures

Florida Ghost City Being Reconditioned For Religious Group

Intercession City, Fla. — (AP) — The Household of Faith, a non-denominational Christian sect, has taken over Intercession City, once a ghost town, and is converting it into a vocational training center for young men and women.

Promoters spent nearly a million dollars during the boom days of 1925 in developing the new city, by building a hotel, an apartment house, stores, a factory and residences.

The boom collapsed and only 12 persons were living here three years ago when J. W. Wile, Indianapolis philanthropist, gave the town and 5,000 acres of land to the Household of Faith.

Miss Osie English, leader of the movement, said persons from 19 states are now living and studying in the community. Old buildings have been renovated and new ones erected.

Suggests List of Success Rules for Medical Students

English Actor Gives Advice For Young Doctors To Follow

London — A long list of "do's" and "don'ts" to guide them to success and popularity among patients have been offered students of the Westminster Hospital Medical School by Sir Seymour Hicks, famous actor-manager, speaking as a "patient of 60 years' standing."

"I have enjoyed a great many very pleasant illnesses in my time," he said. "In fact, at times, I have almost been a professional patient. That is my only excuse for having the temerity to come here and give you a few scraps of advice to remember when you leave the hospital and embark on general practice."

Here are Sir Seymour's Do's and Don'ts for young doctors:

Don't keep your patients waiting.

Don't let your wife talk about medicine and surgery in private life.

Don't give us small talk in the consulting-room.

Don't try and impress on us that you're attending Lord and Lady Lipstick.

Don't allow scandal to be talked in your presence.

Don't go to the moneylenders.

Don't talk medical shop in mixed company.

Do always dress for the part.

Do cultivate an easy, smiling manner.

Do employ a smiling parlormaid to open the door.

Do be definite, even if you're wrong.

A general practitioner's patients, said Sir Seymour, are divided into four kinds.

"Fifty per cent of them are natural people — be very kind to them," he advised. "Thirty per cent are shy — treat them with tolerance. Ten per cent are snobs — give them a swift kick in the pants. And ten per cent are idiots. Get down on your knees and thank heaven for that last ten per cent — for they'll never find you out."

BUILT TO TAKE IT

New York — (AP) — An ancient Egyptian ox cart, used for transporting sacred animals to the sacrifice, some 200 years before Christ, is on view at the New York Museum of Science and Industry in Rockefeller Center.

The cart was found in a vault of an old temple on the banks of the Nile, which was undergoing excavation some years ago. So securely had the walls of the vault been sealed when the cart was placed there that, although well below high water mark, no water had penetrated during any of the river's many inundations.

The wood, although deeply grooved by age, is still firm.

Maine was part of Massachusetts until 1820.

Meditations of Marcus Aurelius Are Applicable to 20th Century

By Jean Wiley Thickens

"MEDITATIONS OF MARCUS AURELIUS"

With the arrival of mid-summer comes the seasonal death of new books. This is an excellent opportunity to renew one's acquaintance with some of the favorite old classics, or to discover them for the first time. At what better point can one begin than with the "Meditations of Marcus Aurelius." The publisher has written a brief preface to this edition in which he states that "in hours of discouragement or sorrow, the Meditations are a tonic and a consolation. They are so sane and sound, so simple and convincing."

Though written in haste and with little regard to style, they are nonetheless worthy to be included among the greatest classics of the ancient or modern world. Their influence may be detected in many later essays, and our own "Sage of Concord," Ralph Waldo Emerson, seems almost to be a reincarnation of that beloved Roman emperor.

Marcus Aurelius wrote his essays while he was occupying various military encampments in Germany, being engaged in fighting valiantly to prevent the German hordes from over-running Italy. It would probably be a cause of serious disillusionment to Hitler to learn through the writings of Marcus Aurelius, that in the second century, the Germans were not regarded as God's Chosen Aryans, but rather as undesirable Barbarians who left nothing but death and destruction in their wake.

Conducted Campaigns

Marcus Aurelius, the son of Annius Verus, was born at Rome April 8th, 121 A. D. When he was 17 he was adopted by the emperor Antoninus Pius. At the age of 19 he was made consul and in the year 161 he ascended the throne. Marcus Aurelius conducted several campaigns against the Germans of the Danube and Upper Rhine though he never referred to these campaigns in his Meditations further than by the headings of his essays: "this among the Quadi," etc. He possessed the power to project himself beyond his warlike surroundings and find peace and quiet in the writing of his essays and the contemplation of the philosophy which he advocated.

Perhaps there has never been a period in the world's history more in need of the wise, kindly and tolerant philosophy which he expounds than our present, turbulent one. Marcus Aurelius was surprisingly humane for the violent age in which he lived. When one of his generals plotted against his life and was himself killed, the emperor regretted that he had been deprived of the pleasure of pardoning him and he destroyed all documents which implicated his traitorous general. Though his wife Faustina was a badtempered and dissolute woman, he sincerely mourned her death and refers to her in his Meditations as "obedient, affectionate, and remote from luxury." Marcus Aurelius died in the sixteenth year of his life at Vienna, while engaged on his campaign against the Germans. His untimely death was mourned as a national calamity and he became an object of religious veneration. He was even believed to appear to people in dreams like the Christian saints.

Clear Thinking

It is with astonishment that the reader comes across passages in his essays which seem to be written expressly for the twentieth century, rather than the second. This is because the actions which he prescribes for various situations are those which any clear thinking person in any age would recognize as right. Therein lies the immortal quality of his philosophy.

He is fond of advocating such theories as "Perform every action as though it were your best." "Never throw away your legs to stand on crutches," and again "the best way of revenge, is not to imitate the injury."

His theories on death are remarkable and though he is a pagan, his innate Christianity shines through all his philosophy. In one of his many references to death he remarks: "Look you! You have embarked; you have made the voyage, you have come to shore, get out. If you happen to land on another world there will be Gods to take care of you; but if you drop into nothing, why then you will no more be solicited by pleasure or pain. And in all his dealings with his fellowmen he advocates trust, sympathy and tolerance. If the nations of today would but follow the advice of that lovable old sage, peace and good-will would prevail rather than mutual hate and suspicion.

New Vaccine Checks Spreading of Fever From Wood Ticks

Cheyenne, Wyo. — A new vaccine to prevent Rocky Mountain spotted fever from developing in persons bitten by wood ticks "undoubtedly is a major factor" in a reduction this year in the number of cases of fever in Wyoming, Dr. G. M. Anderson, state health officer, reports.

So far this year only 20 Wyoming cases have been noticed, compared with 63 in 1935; 47 in 1936 and 61 in 1937. The worst of the tick fever season usually is over by July although last year cases were reported as late as August.

The vaccine was developed by the United States public health service's laboratory at Hamilton, Mont., and is used widely in the west where the fever is prevalent.

Taking a hint from the recent rage for auto trailers, British railways have "parked" comfortable coaches containing sleeping and eating facilities at villages in Wales and the Scottish Highlands so that travelers can see these interesting parts of Great Britain and still enjoy the luxuries of first class railroad accommodation.

Meads Back From Stay In Florida

Mrs. and Mrs. Olin Mead and their children, Olin, Charles and Barbara Ann, returned this week from Florida, where they had been since last October. Leaving Florida on June 4, they traveled up the east coast, stopping at various places, at historic Charleston, S. C., St. Augustine, Fla., Williamsburg, Va., and New York. They plan to spend most of the summer at their cottage on Utowanna beach, Lake Winnebago.

ESCAPE CITY CARES AT COTTAGES AT LAKESIDE

TYPICAL of the surroundings in which many Appleton residents will spend the Fourth of July weekend are these scenes taken at the lakeside community of rustic cottages, hammocks, flower gardens and sandy beach which lies a few miles south of Appleton on the northern shore of Lake Winnebago.

Watching the yachts which sail every day on the lake, Mrs. Alfred Bosser and her two younger children, Alfred, Jr., and Mary Louise, provided the attractive picture in the center. Their recently redecorated summer home stands next door to the Adsit's cottage.

Long boards, set in orange crates, rockers with cushions, and all manner of boxes formed the theater seats. Green curtains, intricately fastened with rope and

900 Outagamie Families Share $22,000 in Aid

State Social Security Assistance Averages $22.15 Per Family

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—Shifts from winter to summer budgets by welfare departments in several big Wisconsin counties this spring brought the first decrease in the total amount of social security aids disbursed in the state since the organization of the state pension department and the system, pension officials said today.

Although case loads for the month of May showed an increase over the previous month, elimination of fuel and winter clothing allowances from the welfare budgets of families and individuals brought a reduction in the total amount of social security aids from $1,222,449 for April to $1,218,978 for May, the pension department said in statistics made public today.

Of the total amount spent, $319,362 went to 40,190 old age pension beneficiaries, an increase of 1.2 per cent over the previous month in the number of cases, and 11.3 per cent in the number of persons over the same period last year. A total of 23,378 children in more than 10,000 families got $355,949, while blind pensioners remained at the same number, 1,964, receiving $43,665.

A total of 48,855 separate families were aided through the three forms of social security aids in Wisconsin during May, with the average grant to separate family reported at $26.31, and the range of county averages reported at from $34.30 to $17.97.

Figures for separate families aided through blind, old age, or dependent children's aids in the counties of the Appleton area, together with total expenditures and average payments, are reported by the pension department as follows:

Two Confederate Soldiers' Blame General Longstreet For Defeat at Gettysburg

Gettysburg, Pa.—(7)—Two aged Confederate soldiers, standing upon the famous battlefield where they fought three-quarters of a century ago, blamed General James E. Longstreet Friday for the defeat of the southern forces in the battle that turned the tide against the Confederacy.

"Longstreet betrayed us," declared General O. R. Gilette, 93, of Shreveport, La., one of 2,000 Civil war veterans here for the final review of the blue and gray. "He should have ordered Pickett to charge at 8 a. m., but he didn't. He waited until 1 o'clock, and let Meade bring in 22,000 fresh Union troops."

Pickett's charge, faltering in the very mazes of northern cannon at Bloody Angle in the third day of fighting, sent Lee retreating into southern territory to defend Richmond and marked the turning point of the great war between the north and south.

"Would Have Won"

Said 95-year-old Charles S. Rigin, of Vaughan, N. C., private in the Rhodes division: "If Longstreet had given us needed support in time, we would have won the battle. He let the Yanks fight on us."

But today, on this seventy-fifth anniversary of the great battle and with all animosity forgotten, Gilette said he believed it all "happened for the best."

"Certainly it was the best thing for the south," he declared.

The statements of the two old soldiers, who are among 15 here who fought in the battle, brought from General Longstreet's widow a vehement defense of her husband as the "bulldog of the southern army." She is attending the reunion as a special guest of the anniversary commission.

"Saved Worse Defeat"

"His (Longstreet's) judgment saved them from even worse defeat," she asserted. "General Lee relied on his advice, and took the whole blame for defeat at Gettysburg, after the battle."

"I am writing an answer to all the unfair and false statements made against General Longstreet." Under a hot Pennsylvania sun, Gilette and Rigin, together with more than a thousand of their comrades, were gathered here for the annual reunion.

Kaws to Battle Green Bay Drugs In League Game

Manager Kilgas Puts Fox Valley Team Through Final Paces for Tilt

Kaukauna—The longest practice session of the season was held last night by Manager Wally Kilgas' Fox River Valley league team in preparation for the loop's outstanding attraction tomorrow afternoon when they take on the Thomas Drugs of Green Bay at the local park. The tilt will begin at 2:15. The Drugs are the winners of seven straight contests, and a victory for the Kaws will establish them as a favorite to cop the second half title.

Eddie Schuler, behind whom the Kaws have yet to be defeated, will toe the mound. Out the first half due to illness, Schuler has pitched great ball in his two appearances the second half. Junior Martens will be behind the bat. Martens is a recent addition to the club, playing his first game last Sunday.

The rest of the Kaws lineup will have Ray Dietrick at first, Bill Rohan at second, Carl Schuler at short and Joey Gertz at third. Gertz is a batting average of 1.00 so far this year, connecting for four out of four in his only game. In the outfield Joe Gossens of Kimberly, Vic Rohan and Gib Busse will start. Gossens played his first game last week, when the Kaws tripped Appleton, 4 to 2, to get off to a good start in their first tilt of the second half. Summer Standby

One of the summer's standbys—a simple all-around frock—is designed of sheer cross-striped navy blue rayon crepe. Because of its color and weave it can be worn comfortably in both warm and cool weather. Pleating appears both in the cape sleeves and in the skirt, while the vee neckline is piped in white pique.

Growing Children Need Plenty of Food, Sleep

BY ANGELO PATRI

"Harold has failed in two subjects and the school says he must repeat his work next term. He can attend summer school and make these subjects up. He seems lazy all the time and cries when he scold him, and says he is doing the best he can. But he failed. Should we make him go to summer school, or what?"

This is an adolescent boy who has grown inches in six months and whose strength is about used up in his growth. When children grow as fast as this—one of our boys in school is six feet, one; weighs one hundred sixty pounds, and is not yet fourteen—they have to have time out to catch up. They cannot grow as fast as this and stand well in all their subjects. They need plenty of food, sleep, rest and peace.

Many boys fail, and girls too, at this stage of their growth. The junior high schools have many such. Among them are occasional pupils who manage to carry on, but most of them slow up and have to be given extra time. Compelling these children to attend summer sessions to make up work is not always the best thing for their health.

The country, a summer camp, a farm, where these youngsters have change of scene, fresh, pure air, simple and nourishing food, is usually the best answer. If they can rest and feel relieved of the pressure of work, they are likely to go back to school ready to take on extra work and do it well. If they are held in school all summer, or coached, they are not rested and they are not likely to do better work.

One of the things they like to do is to sit up as late as possible and sleep late in the morning. That won't do, either. Their bedtime should be early, and it should be set at about nine o'clock. They must get up in the morning by the clock, about seven. They need this strict routine for the sake of their bodies and minds. Regularity is the secret of success with the pre-adolescent, and it will work well with those of the later stage, too.

These children are irritable because they are tired. We cannot prevent them from getting tired. They tire easily because their growth is unseasoned. But we can try to routine their day so as to prevent them from being overtired.

These children need a lot of sleep.

OCTAGON HOUSE

BY PHOEBE ATWOOD TAYLOR

The Story So Far: Asey Mayo, Cape Cod detective, is investigating the murder of Marina Lorne, whose husband's post office mural has enraged Quonomet. She was killed by a left handed blow from the knife of her sister Pam Frye. Interested parties are: Tim Carr, once married to Marina; Roddy Sturt, whose alibiing plane crash was deliberate; Ed Bone, an artist; Jennings, an irate plumber; and persons unknown who burned down the Frye's barn, bluffed Asey, Tim, and Pam's father, destroyed Jack Lorne's mural sketches and defaced the mural itself. Missing is a $30,000 lump of ambergris belonging to Pam. Then Roddy disappears, and the biffer turns out to be Jennings who has just spanked Lorne.

Chapter 42
Strange and Beautiful

"LL murder him, Ill—" "If you insist," Tim said, "let me give you the address of this lad I know. He's a professional builder-upper. Maybe inside of two or three years, you might take a whack at Jennings, but I'd just give the whole idea up."

"No one can do that," Lorne said dramatically, "to me. And live!" He got up from the couch and strode around the studio.

"No one!" he yelled, and hurled a glass vase at the fireplace. "No one!"

"Not that," Tim said. "Don't throw that, Jack. Take a nice Toby, far to good for you to smash for demonstration purposes. Take this highball glass, if you have to express yourself in the future."

Assey wanted for Lorne to calm down. "Now," he said, "now here comes the Jennings here!" Frowny sat back, because it made a lot of difference.

"Oh about a quarter to seven—between seven-thirty and six—after six," Lorne said. "No earlier than seven-thirty. He came in and picked me up, and—speaking of me—"

"Then what did he do?" Wally said to Tim.

"I don't know, but when I see him again—on, you can leave, but the next time I see him, I'll break every bone—"

Assey said to Tim, "Go down-way and began to chuck." "And if you don't go, I'll break me," Lorne said. "I'll be damned. I mean what I say about Jennings!"

Tim smiled. "Well, he—" he said. "Aren't you?" he said and suddenly of the man standing in the doorway, "aren't you, Mr. Jennings?"

Assey pointed to a chair. "Sit down, an' let me hear. You beat it from the hospital soon after I seen you yesterday, Why?"

With under honesty Jennings explained.

"The money there was being made," he said. "I just couldn't bear lying there and thinking of that money, and me getting none of it. And then up town, a reporter spotted me and asked if I was the man with the leaking pipes—lots of people who'd seen the mural, they all recognized me and they kept kidding me, and I got sore. And by the time I got all set to cash in on the tour, the money the outsiders had come with their midways, and there wasn't any money for me to make. And then I and a couple of drinks, and then more people recognized me, and I kept getting sorer."

"And started off after Lorne,"

"I Seem to Get Mad"

"Tee Honest," Jennings said. "The sorry I whacked you, I was so mad. I didn't know what I was doing. And I thought you was funny Green. And those troopers that I was in my way. And then I sneaked in this house, and I didn't it was Lorne coming, but it was Aaron Frye—I am awful sorry about that. I'll pay all his bills and damages and all. You know, I did think he was Lorne. And then when I seen what I had done I felt bad. And then I said to myself, Earl, I said, you go back and see how I can arrange you to get out of here, and then— But when I came back, the troopers was after me, and I had to run."

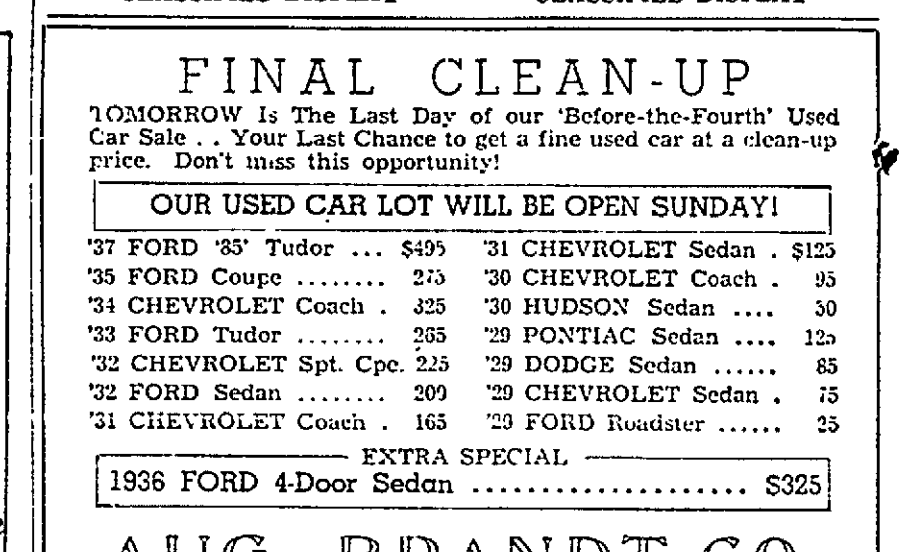

To the fact, on you fowed 'em at the pond," Assey finished up. "If it'll make you feel any worse,

Week-end Digest of Business Activity In Appleton and Vicinity

Play Safely and Celebrate Sanely.
Is Employers' Advice for Holiday

"It's smart to be careful," says the famous "top hat" insignia that is to be found on Employers Mutuals' safety literature, and this insignia is again present on a card mailed this week to everyone whose name appears on Employers Mutuals' mailing list.

For the Fourth of July is at hand a double holiday that can mean happiness for those who follow Employers Mutuals' suggestion to "Play Safely" and "Celebrate Sanely." It is a double holiday that can mean tragedy for those who drive carelessly, swim dangerously, handle fireworks recklessly, or generally disregard the need for common sense when in the holiday mood.

With the Wisconsin accident rate greatly reduced over the 1937 figures, Employers Mutuals are particularly anxious to see this record maintained. This company, together with numerous civic and private groups, has been active in promoting safety in every field of activity.

Meanwhile, Employers continue to offer complete protection in practically every insurance field, particularly automobile, employers' compensation, fire, tornado, and the like. The mutual system of doing business, moreover, enables the company to return substantial dividends to policyholders each year, thereby definitely reducing the cost of insurance, yet giving the finest type of protection and service at the same time.

A telephone call to R. J. White at 6700, or a visit to Employers Mutuals' complete office in the Zuelke building, will bring complete details without any obligation.

Fire Department at Marion Has Meeting

Marion—L. C. Anson, who is attending the summer session at the University of Iowa, arrived home Friday to spend the holidays with his wife.

The volunteer fire department held its monthly meeting Friday evening instead of Monday, because of the coming holiday. Arrangements were made to send some of the firemen to Clintonville to take part in parade on Monday and they will also take part in a water fight against Tigerton Sunday evening.

Commodity Room Will Open Doors Tuesday

Tomatoes, rice, and dried apples will be distributed from the commodity room of the county relief and welfare department in the old post office building Tuesday. The room will be open from 9 o'clock to 11:30 in the morning and from 1 o'clock to 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Choice of Paper
And Type Vital
To Good Printing

Reliable Bauer Printing Company Watches Every Detail Carefully

Soliciting printing work solely on its ability to turn out satisfactory work, the Bauer Printing Company, 315 W. College avenue, headed by Max Bauer, has steadily acquired an enviable reputation. Mr. Bauer's 35 years of experience in the printing field has convinced him that quality, service, and price are the main factors governing printing requirements and consequently has successfully displayed application of these rules to every job entrusted to him.

Selection of the right kind of paper is an important feature in designing a printing job, the Bauer firm maintains. Effort is, therefore, made to select a suitable paper fitted best for the printing to be done. Bauer's carry a large stock of various grades of fine printing paper, making it possible for the printer and the customer to choose the kind most adapted to the work.

Of equal importance, too, is that of type selection. Bauer printing again leads in this respect, offering modern designs in a large variety of type faces. Skilled printers whose knowledge is backed by years of experience in the printing trade know at an instant just what styles and sizes of types to use for each particular job of printing to add a touch of beauty and attractiveness that will appeal to the most intricate eye. Bauer's make-up experience, too, offers each printing job careful attention as to modern designs, appealing appearance, and well-balanced form.

Prompt attention is given freely and without obligation every inquiry concerning a printing job whether by telephone or make a personal visit to their headquarters. The phone number, if you prefer to call for estimates, is 387.

neither one of 'em can swim worth a cent, and it was the will of God that they somehow managed to land on Dune Island and not in Davey Jones's locker."

Jennings shook his head sorrowfully. "Well," he said, "I guess I got a lot to be ashamed of. Anyway, I went back to town and had a few more drinks, and then I went to Strutt's. I was sore at Roddy by then. Honest, I don't know why it is, but the minute I got a few drinks in me, I seem to get mad."

"You do," Tim said.

"And then," Jennings went on, "my wife made me come home, and this morning she got the doctor, and they made me go back to the hospital. Then I met Jerry Chase, and he got me mad again, kidding about those pipes, and then this afternoon—well, I had to leave, Ascy. I'd have burst if I hadn't come over here and given Lorne what was coming to him. Of course, if I'd got hold of him last night, I might have hurt him bad. But just spanking him, it eased my feelings right away. Like magic, ain't that strange?"

"Strangest," Ascy said, "an' beautiful. Beautiful to think you're back to normal again now, when you came back here last night an' biffed Aaron."

"That's something I want to talk to you about," Jennings said. "I thought of this plan last night before I came back, and the troopers chased me. Pam's been wanting water laid on, and a bathroom, over to Octagon House. Do you suppose, if I fixed 'em up fine, they'd forgive me? I like Aaron, and I'm awfully sorry this happened. I didn't know he was hurt so bad till I heard them talking in the

A comfortable home which is well managed and pleasant to live in means everything to the health and well-being of the family. Such a home is a place where its entire membership spends many enjoyable hours at different tasks and enjoyments. Much of this time is spent in the most important room of the home, the living room.

There the family whiles away its leisure hours and there most of the entertaining is done besides such eye-straining studies and tasks as piano playing, knitting and reading. This room necessarily should be comfortable without a suspicion of stiffness, a requirement which can be best met by a discriminating selection of lighting equipment which will achieve the desired effect as well as provide for adequate illumination.

The most valuable possession of any human being is good eyesight and eyesight must be protected from early years. This can be done only with good light furnished by correct lighting equipment. You should have enough light in your home so that even the poorest of old eyes can see easily at such light-demanding tasks as mentioned above. Cinderella Will
Hold Two Dances
During Weekend

Maloney Also Presents
Fine Orchestras at Eweco
Park, Oshkosh

Celebrating the Fourth of July weekend with two big dances, the famous air-cooled Cinderella ballroom presents Rube's Westerners on Sunday night, July 3, and Pep Babler's old-time musical organization on Monday night, July 4th. This announcement was made yesterday by Charles Maloney, manager of the ballroom.

Always an attractive spot, Cinderella has been made even more enjoyable by the addition of air-cooling—a factor that enables Cinderella patrons to enjoy dancing no matter how hot the weather. Adding to Cinderella's popularity, Mr. Maloney has also announced that, despite the double-barreled weekend attraction, individual admittance charges will be only 15c each night. This moderate price policy makes Cinderella dances the most popularly priced in the valley.

Dancers who enjoy the affairs Mr. Maloney has been arranging, and who want an evening of modern dance music, are invited to make the short drive down to Eweco park, Oshkosh, where Bill Benson and his orchestra, from Chicago, will hold forth on Sunday night, July 3, and Earl Kemp will appear on Monday night, July 4.

The regular Eweco schedule—aside from this weekend—calls for an old time dance every Friday night and modern music on Sunday nights throughout the summer.

NOT 'EASY SPOTS'

South Bend, Ind.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Watkins, deaf mutes, were awakened by the "rumbling vibrations" of a burglar early the other day and frightened him from their home.

Watkins and his wife told police they were awakened at 3 a. m. by vibrations resembling the passing of a railroad train.

Watkins went down stairs and confronted the man in the dining room. The intruder fled through a window he had shattered for his entry.

Lutz Gives 24 Hour
Service for Patrons
Who Run Short on Ice

There's no danger of running short of ice over the weekend, refrigerator owners will be pleased to know, because the Lutz Ice company will be operating on a 24 hour basis, with regular deliveries scheduled despite the double holiday.

Consequently, whether the refrigerator needs to be filled, or whether it's a matter of extra Lutz ice cubes to care for entertainment needs, the Lutz company will be ready to care for all customers at any time. Coolerator customers who have checked their ice supply at sometime during the past few days, of course, probably won't be taking advantage of the Lutz service, because a Coolerator is extremely stingy when it comes to using ice.

Dog Training Session
At Park Is Cancelled

The dog training session, scheduled for Sunday morning at Alicia park, has been cancelled because many dog owners will leave town over the weekend, according to Dr. L. H. Dillon, one of the trainers. However, the group will meet between 9 o'clock and 11 o'clock the following Sunday at Alicia park. The training course is being sponsored by the Appleton chapter of the Northeastern Wisconsin Kennel club.

Ascy looked at him. "Can you prove what time you got over here, or when you left the hospital?" he said.

"Why, I don't know as I could tell you exactly. They got my watch at the hospital, you know. But it was the minister that gave me the lift. I guess he could tell you, all right. Look, can I get into the garage?"

Ascy shook his head. "The cops got the key."

"Well, then," Jennings turned to Lorne. "I can't do any more till that's open. Say, Ascy, can I see Aaron?" I'd like to get it over as soon as I can. If I could just make Pam and Aaron understand that I really didn't mean a thing—"
